GOVERNOR SENDS TROOPS

But They Reach Chicago Too Late to Stop Peace Rally.

THOMPSON ASSIGNS POLICE

Ordered Patrolmen to Guard the Delegates Whom They Dispersed on Saturday.

TALK OF IMPEACHING MAYOR

But Illinois Law Seems Inadequate—Governor Explains His Position.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—The pacifist convention, which was broken up yesterday by police acting under orders of Governor Frank O. Lowden, held a public meeting today at which they had police protection provided by Mayor William H. Thompson.

On discovering Mayor Thompson's defiant move, Governor Lowden dispatched four companies of militia from Springfield to prevent the meeting, but they arrived here too late. So, the People's Council of America for Democracy and Terms of Peace managed to perfect formal organization after its sessions had been prohibited in Minnesota, North Dakota, and Wisconsin.

A statement was issued by Governor Lowden tonight as follows:

"The Governor was informed about noon today that the so-called National Council of America for Democracy and Peace proposed to hold another meeting in Chicago this afternoon, the Chief of Police having been instructed not to interfere. This, of course, was a big surprise to him. Having no State troops in Chicago, the Governor tried to communicate with General Carter, commanding the Central Department at Chicago, for the purpose of preventing the meeting. He failed, however, to reach General Carter. He also tried to communicate with Sheriff Traeger, but was informed that the Sheriff was out of town, and would not be back until late this afternoon. He at once ordered the Adjutant General to proceed to Chicago with troops to prevent the further continuance of the meeting.

To Incite Draft Riots.

"The Governor is satisfied that this meeting was designed for the purpose of bringing on draft riots and obstructing the Government in other respects. For that reason he has felt that he should use all the resources at his command to suppress such meeting."

Governor Lowden expressed surprise at the refusal of Mayor Thompson to co-operate with him in putting down the so-called peace meeting. The Governor sent Mayor Thompson a telegram yesterday explaining his position, and expressing the belief that the Mayor would agree with him that the pacifist conference should not be held in Illinois.

The Mayor started to hand out his aid for the pacifists early this morning. They got their first word at a secret session at the Foreword office, 1,144 South Halsted Street. They were told over the telephone that the police not only would not interfere with their meeting but would supply protection, and, furthermore, that the management of the West Side Auditorium would give them a lease if they applied for it.

The Committee of Arrangements, including Seymour Stedman and Robert H. Howe, both local Socialists, got options on five halls, then visited Police Chief Schuettler to ascertain if the indirect word from the Mayor was authentic.

"Sure, go ahead—just as long as you behave yourselves."

The delegates announced a meeting for the West Side Auditorium, and opened the session between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

H. H. Merrick, one of the patriotic citizens of Chicago, got word to Governor Lowden through Adjt. Gen. Dickson on the long-distance telephone at Springfield. He explained the announced program.

Governor Seeks Troops.

The Governor attempted twice to get Sheriff Traeger on the wire and order him to use his 200 deputies and bailiffs to disperse the crowd and prohibit the meeting. The Sheriff was at the funeral of Judge Honore. The Chief Executive of the State could not wait. He attempted to get in communication with Major Gen. W. H. Carter, commander of the Central Division of the army, to have troops dispatched from Fort Sheridan or from other camps where guards had been mustered into the United States service. That took too much time, so the Governor ordered a battalion of the Ninth Infantry to take a special train for Chicago.

Chief Schuettler remained at his office all day and evening, but the Mayor, after he had given the Chief instructions, departed from his Lake Forest home for a day of outing at Lake Geneva, Wis. General Carter and Sheriff Traeger sent messages to Governor Lowden late in the afternoon. The Sheriff's was a tender of aid, but the nature of the General's message was not made public.

The Governor already had ordered

Wilson Denounces "Forces of Antagonism" Here And Praises the Conference of Loyal Labor Alliance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Hearty approval of the conference of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, to be held at Minneapolis Tuesday, has been given by President Wilson in a letter to Samuel Gompers, in which he denounces those who seek to ignore America's grievance against Germany. The letter, made public here today, reads:

WHITE HOUSE, Washington, Aug. 31, 1917.

My Dear Mr. Gompers: I am sure that you understand that my inability to accept the invitation to address the Minneapolis conference of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy is due only to official necessity, and not in any degree to lack of appreciation of the importance of the occasion. The cause you and your fellow-patriots uphold is one with the cause we are defending with arms. While our soldiers and sailors are doing their manful work to hold back reaction in its most brutal and aggressive form, we must oppose at home the organized and individual efforts of those dangerous elements who hide disloyalty behind a screen of specious and evasive phrases.

I have read with real pride the names of the men and women who are to take part in the Minneapolis conference. Not one but has a record of devoted service to fundamental democracy; not one but has fought the long, hard fight for equal justice, braving every bitterness that the humblest life might know a larger measure of happiness.

With all my heart I want them to feel that their devotion to country is in nowise a betrayal of principle, and that in serving America today they are serving their cause no less faithfully than in the past. I, myself, have had sympathy with the fears of the workers of the United States; for the tendency of war is toward reaction, and too often military necessities have been made an excuse for the destruction of laboriously erected industrial and social standards. These fears, happily, have proved to be baseless. With quickened sympathies and appreciation, with a new sense of the invasive and insidious dangers of oppression, our people have not only held every inch of ground that has been won by years of struggle, but have added to the gains of the twentieth century along every line of human betterment.

Questions of wages and hours of labor and industrial readjustment have found a solution which gives to the toiler a new dignity and a new sense of social and economic security. I beg you to feel that my support has not been lacking, and that the Government has not failed at any point in granting every just request advanced by you and your assistants in the name of the American worker.

No one who is not blind can fail to see that the battle line of democracy for America stretches today from the fields of Flanders to every house and workshop where toiling, upward-striving men and women are counting the treasures of right and justice and liberty which are being threatened by our present enemies.

It has not been a matter of surprise to me that the leaders in certain groups have sought to ignore our grievances against the men who have equally misled the German people. Their insistence that a nation whose rights have been grossly violated, whose citizens have been foully murdered under their own flag, whose neighbors have been invited to join in making conquest of its territory, whose patience in pressing the claims of justice and humanity has been met with the most shameful policy of truculence and treachery, their insistence that a nation so outraged does not know its own mind, that it has no comprehensible reason for defending itself, or for joining with all its might in maintaning a free future for itself and its ideals, is of a piece with their deafness to the oft-repeated statement of our national purposes.

Is it, perhaps, that these forces of antagonism have not yet learned to know the voice of that America we love and serve? It may well be that those among us who stand ready to forward the plans of aggression bred in secret do not understand the language of democracy when it proclaims the purposes of war in terms of a peace for the peoples that shall be untroubled by those to whom men are but the pawns in their struggle for power and gain. But true Americans, those who toil here for home and the hope of better things, whose lifted eyes have caught the vision of a liberated world, have said that of the policy of blood and iron there shall be an end and that equal justice which is the heart of democracy shall rule in its stead.

May not those who toil and those who have made common cause of the larger hope for the masses of mankind take renewed heart as they think on those days when America has taken its stand for the rights of humanity and the fellowship of social and international justice?

Sincerely yours, WOODROW WILSON.

WORKERS' ENVOYS GO TO CONCLAVE

Grand Central Throng Sings "The Star-Spangled Banner" as Delegates Start.

SPARGO OUTLINES PLANS

Says the Gathering Will Be an Answer to People's Council's Propaganda.

The New York City delegates to the Labor Loyalty convention in Minneapolis left the Grand Central Terminal at noon yesterday on their "Red, White, and Blue Special" to help prove to the world that the workers of the United States will uphold the Government to the finish in its task of defeating the German Government.

In marked contrast to the departure of the pacifists from the Weehawken station of the West Shore Railroad last Wednesday, the delegates received a rousing send-off from a crowd of 5,000 persons which filled the concourse of the big terminal and the galleries. The demonstration, which was under the direction of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, began at 11 o'clock. Music was supplied by the Caledonian Pipers and a brass band, which played patriotic airs while the delegates were gathering. Lanes had been roped off for the use of passengers departing on other trains, and the rest of the big floor was turned over to the celebration.

It was a very striking scene when Miss Marie Louise Wagner, the opera singer, went to the landing at the junction of the two stairways leading from the concourse floor the galleries and, surrounded by American, British, Italian and French sailors, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." After she had sung the anthem through once Miss Wagner led the audience in chorus. The sailors in her guard and soldiers and sailors in the terminal stood at attention while the anthem was sung with stirring effect.

The delegates left on a train made up of three Pullman sleeping cars, a dining car, two baggage cars, and a smoker.

GERMAN ALLIANCE SPLIT ON THE WAR

New York State Delegates to Meet in Albany—Up-State Bodies May Secede.

FIGHT ON HENRY WEISMANN

Attitude of American Press and Agitation Against German in the Schools to be Discussed.

Under an emergency call, representatives of every branch of the German-American alliance in the State will gather at Albany today to try to get together on some consistent policy for the organization, the different units of which have become more and more at odds in the last three years. Just what the differences are in detail is kept secret, but it is known that the resentment of some of the up-State branches against the New York City branch has grown to the point where the up-State divisions threaten to withdraw from the State organization and form a separate body. The New York City branch has the President of the State organization, Henry Weismann, who last year won the condemnation of some members by his inauguration speech at Utica in which he attacked President Wilson.

Members of the New York City Branch would not talk for publication about the rumpus yesterday. Mr. Weismann was out of the city. The notice sent out by the State Secretary for the Albany meeting said that its purpose was to harmonize differences in the alliance, but it also stated that among the other things to be discussed were these:

1. The war situation and the attitude of the American press toward the Germans.
2. Agitation against teaching the German language in the public schools of America.
3. Advisability of a State convention this year.

Adolph Meyer, President of the Albany branch of the German-American Alliance, said last night at his home that it was much more than likely that the up-State branches would withdraw from the State organization and form another body. Mr. Meyer thought Albany ought to be its centre. He said this action was likely because the New York City members had been trying to use the alliance to further their own political and personal ends and to promote in-

Italians Won Their Victory to Music; Toscanini Led the Band; Decorated for It

ROME, Sept. 2.—Arthur Toscanini, the noted Italian conductor, for several years up to 1915 musical director at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, has been decorated by the Italian Government for great bravery under fire. Signor Toscanini, the accounts from the front disclose, kept his military band playing during the battle of Monte Santo in the present offensive on the Italian front, the soldiers storming the positions of the enemy to the strains of this martial music.

In the midst of the fighting and at a time when the Austrian barrage fire was at its height Signor Toscanini led his band to one of the advanced positions where, sheltered only by a huge rock, he conducted a concert which did not stop until word had been brought to him that the Italian soldiers had stormed and taken the trenches of the Austrians to the music of his band.

The medal, which is inscribed with a suitable engraving, is made of silver.

O'RYAN'S TROOPS WILL SAIL SOON

Twenty-seventh Division Likely to Start for France in a Few Weeks.

FINAL TRAINING AT FRONT

General Approves Camp Wadsworth, but Sees Chance for Improvement.

Special to The New York Times.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Sept. 2.—The Twenty-seventh Division, U. S. A., will be at Camp Wadsworth within eight days, and the movement to France will start a few weeks later, it was reported on good authority today. Instead of putting in months at this Southern camp, the Federalized guardsmen will receive merely an extra rigorous course in discipline here, and will then, it is likely, depart overseas, where the work of preparation for the present conditions of warfare will be completed in great drill tracts, possibly within motoring distance of London.

It is said that the camp site now being used by Pershing's men may receive this and other divisions, but the question apparently has not been definitely decided, and actual confirmation could not be obtained.

When Major Gen. O'Ryan was asked to discuss the disposition of his command he declined to enter into details and said that the time was too soon for him to speak of the departure of his troops for the fighting front. Members of his staff maintained a similar reticence, but discovered that the news of a comparatively speedy departure had passed through not only the camp but the countryside.

It was ascertained that the present plans are to use this elaborately equipped camp as an assembling point where the weak spots of the various regiments may be detected and remedied, and special equipment, such as gas masks, may be received and issued. No attempt will be made to instruct the men in the use of the masks, nor will they be drilled in how to cope with liquid fire.

Plans for Troops' Training.

Bomb throwing instruction and drill in the intensive use of the bayonet likewise will be omitted from the camp curriculum. All these drills will be given on the other side. According to this program the members of the Twenty-seventh Division, lately brokers, clerks, journalists, and representatives of every work in New York City, hope to be ready and in the trenches for the opening of the Spring operations.

As for the disposition of Camp Wadsworth it will become a depot headquarters for the division with the departure of the guardsmen. Here will be trained and stationed the recruits obtained in New York State, and when the requisitions begin to arrive from Europe for fresh troops to fill the gaps made by battle or sickness drafts will be dispatched from the camp. It is said that a large number of men obtained through the selective draft will eventually find their way here, be trained, and forwarded to France for assignment with former guard troops.

General O'Ryan arrived in Spartanburg shortly after 1 o'clock this morning, but, tired by his journey, retired immediately. Lack of readiness at the camp sent the General to quarters in a local hotel, where he will maintain headquarters until Tuesday. While he would not permit questioning on the topic of departure, he consented to speak of the aims of the camp and what he had found on this afternoon's tour of inspection.

"For the most part I am satisfied with the progress that has been made at the camp," he said, "and I think that the selection of this site was a most happy one. It is high, and the water supply, proved by tests, is first-class. It is the belief of the constructing Quartermaster, Lieut. Col. Kilpatrick, that the last work at the camp, the building of the big base hospital, will be completed within ten days. If he does that, however, he will be a good one, and I think that the ten-day estimate is rather optimistic.

"One thing, though, that I found not quite ideal is the drill ground. This space is entirely too small, and I think that it may be necessary to lease considerable additional land to accommodate the troops' movements. There are many other little details, too, that remain to be worked out. For instance, my attention has been called to the water system. This is all completed, but the system has many weak links. A main burst today, and the entire system went out of commission until this had been repaired. We shall try to make the system independent of its parts, so that the hardship of no water for hours will not occur when the soldiers are all down here.

Better Roads Needed.

"One thing that will have to be promptly attended to is the roads leading from the town to the camp. They

German Airmen Raid England; Casualties Probably Few

LONDON, Sept. 2.—A German air raid on the coast of England tonight was announced by the official bureau. Bombs were dropped as the airplanes crossed East Kent. The statement reads:

"Hostile airplanes crossed the East Kent coast at 11:15 o'clock tonight. They flew seaward a few minutes later. A few bombs were dropped. The casualties are believed to be small."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 3.—London had warning toward midnight of an enemy air raid which materialized into nothing more than the visit of one airplane which appeared over a place on the southeast coast, dropped six bombs and turned back. According to late reports little damage was done and nobody was killed, only two persons being injured.

ROME, Monday, Sept. 3. — Italian troops yesterday extended the positions they occupied on Thursday and Friday last in the Brestovizza Valley and on the Carso, the War Office announced today. Additional prisoners and much war material, including nine machine guns and five trench mortars, were captured. Austrian counterattacks at various points were repulsed. In the Stelvio region detachments of Alpini reoccupied the advanced post that was abandoned on Aug. 27, at an altitude of 3,500 meters, and captured the entire Austrian garrison there. The text of the statement reads:

On the Julian front yesterday the fighting was not very intense. Counterattacks were repulsed on the southern edge of the Bainsizza Plateau, on the northern slopes of Monte San Gabriele, northwest of Tivoli, and east of Gorizia. Our airplanes effectively bombarded the reverse of the enemy positions at Monte San Gabriele. At Gabriji, east of Monte San Gabriele, the enemy light artillery repeatedly shelled a field dressing station, causing some casualties.

In the Brestovizza Valley and on the Carso the positions occupied on Thursday and Friday were extended, with the capture of other prisoners and a considerable amount of war material. So far we have removed 1,400 rifles, nine machine guns, five trench mortars, and a great quantity of ammunition and material.

Above Belluno an enemy machine was brought down in an air fight.

In the upper Zebru Valley, in the Stelvio region, parties of Alpini in a brilliant attack, at a height exceeding 3,500 meters, have reoccupied the advanced post abandoned on Aug. 27, capturing the entire enemy garrison.

Italians Drop News In Vienna.

TURIN, Sept. 2.—Five Italian aviators have returned from a successful flight over Vienna.

Leaving the Italian front, the five machines passed over the Austrian lines unobserved and flew straight to the Austrial capital, where the aviators dropped pamphlets informing the people of the city of the great Italian victory.

UDINE, Sept. 2.—The advance of the fighting armies of Italy along sixty miles of front over every variety of ground is a scarcely more impressive spectacle than the work of the hundred thousand men engaged in vast engineering operations in the occupied territories behind the forces which are continually in action. One gains an impression of power in the reconstruction of roads, the throwing of new bridges across streams and chasms, the erection of new military works and by the immense movement along every approach of guns, munitions, supplies of all kinds, ambulances, water tanks, and herds of cattle.

Deserted rocky regions swept a week ago by gunfire have now become a part of Italian territory and are being transformed as though by magic into a habitable country. Where "No Man's Land" is being steadily pushed forward, formidable fortifications are failing one by one, to the astonishment of the enemy, who considered them invulnerable.

PLOT TO SEIZE THE RUSSIAN CABINET FOILED BY ARREST OF MONARCHISTS; GERMANS CROSS DVINA, MOVE ON RIGA

'All Over,' Said German Invited Before Pershing, 'We Are Lost;' Didn't Believe Our Army Was in France

PARIS, Sept. 2.—"It is a pity that so much blood has been shed in vain."

A German officer, taken prisoner in the recent French advance north of Verdun, is thus quoted by the Echo de la Rochelle, and a staff officer who interrogated the German is given as authority for the interview. The German rendered homage to the heroic courage of the French soldiers, but tried to discourage the idea that help would be forthcoming from the United States.

"Why delude yourselves with chimerical hopes, and thus prolong the murderous struggle?" he went on. "You expect irresistible aid from the United States. They promise it, but they will never give it. We know perfectly in Germany what to expect as to the intentions of President Wilson. He is playing with you; he will temporize, without ever going whole-heartedly into the conflict.

"When you are hopelessly beaten, he will be the arbiter of the situation and will impose a peace that will be advantageous to no one but the United States of America. He will never compromise the Stars and Stripes in an adventure on your front."

French officers vainly informed the prisoner that thousands of American soldiers had landed in France and England and had marched through the streets of Paris and London; that a division of American troops was preparing for service at the front; that other contingents, more important, would arrive before the end of the year, and that the United States was arming millions of men.

"Those are only adroit manoeuvres, designed to keep up the spirits of the combatants," replied the prisoner.

The French officer then said: "We will convince you; you shall be conducted before General Pershing, the Commander in Chief of the American expeditionary forces in France, now here on the Verdun front. You can question him yourself, and you will learn whether it is the German people or us who are being deceived by those who govern."

When the escort came to conduct the prisoner before General Pershing, big tears rolled down his cheeks, and he remarked, sadly:

"Since that is the case, it is all over. We are lost."

Stockholm Peace Conference Is Postponed Indefinitely

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The International Socialist Conference, which was to have been convened at Stockholm on Sept. 9, has been postponed, according to a Reuter dispatch from that city.

The committee in charge of the organization has encountered many difficulties, including the refusal of passports, and has been obliged to take this decision.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 3. — Chief place is given in many dispatches from the Continent quoting German press opinion on President Wilson's reply to the Pope, to the vigorously expressed views of the Berlin Vorwärts, organ of the Social Democracy.

The Amsterdam correspondent of The Daily Chronicle says:

"Vorwärts obtains considerable comfort from President Wilson's declaration that the German people must not be robbed, or placed under payment of tribute, though it finds the word 'restoration' something of a stumbling block.

"Vorwärts then proceeds to throw overboard the claim of the German press which, it too, has supported, that the sort of Government which the Germans shall have is Germany's own business and nobody else's."

The correspondent then quotes the Vorwärts thus.

"The German people fight this severest of all fights, not for the rights of certain families or for a distinct form of government, but for its own existence. For that reason the Socialists supported national defense, and for no other reason. The thought were unbearable that those out there were fighting, not for the maintenance of the empire, but for the preservation of conditions not worthy to be upheld. It would be unbearable to think that a single mother's son fell, not for the rights of the people, but for the privileges of certain persons.

"Take the world map and look at one country after another. Everywhere the decision in political questions lies in the hands of persons chosen by the people. It is so everywhere else, why can it not be so with us?

"After more than three years of war a great power says to us that it must be so with us, if we wish to reach peace. Perhaps that is not more than a pretext, but if so, it is so cleverly chosen that we cannot meet it with words but with deeds.

"The government of a country at war with us has a perfect right to demand that for the conditions under which peace is to be concluded the people themselves shall be the guarantee. We cannot be persuaded that the German

Also Advance Toward Port from South — Russians in Rumania Throw Foe Back.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 2.—German troops have crossed the Dvina southeast of Riga and are advancing in a northerly direction, successfully repelling Russian counterattacks, the War Office announced today.

A German offensive also has been opened in the northern sector of the Russian front in the region of Mitau, southwest of Riga. The battle here is still in progress.

On the Rumanian front several sharp attacks were made by the Austro-German forces, but all of these were rendered fruitless by the Russo-Rumanian resistance. One of these attacks was in the vicinity of Braila on the Danube.

The statement reads:

Western front — Yesterday, after strong artillery preparation, the Germans crossed the River Dvina in the region of Uxkul, southeast of Riga, occupied Kupfermammer, and developed their success in a northerly direction. Our troops counterattacked without success.

Today the enemy also assumed the offensive in the region of Mitau. The battle is still proceeding.

In the direction of Kovel (Volhynia,) in the region of Velick-Kukbary, last night the enemy let loose several gas clouds and then launched an attack, but not with large forces. He was repelled by our reserves, which have now arrived. After a short time the enemy again loosed gas clouds, not accompanying them by an infantry attack.

In the direction of Vladimir-Volynski, (Volhynia,) after the bombardment of our position by chemical shells, the enemy assumed the offensive in the region of Zubilno-Preshem and succeeded in the sector south of the village in breaking into the trenches of one of our companies, but was driven out by a counterattack.

Rumanian front—In the direction of Fokshani last night the enemy attacked several sectors of the Rumanian positions north and northeast of Ireshti. All were repelled. Yesterday the enemy, after strong artillery preparation, atacked again with considerable forces the Rumanian positions in the region north of Ireshti, but were repelled with heavy losses. We captured a number of prisoners. In the direction of Braila the enemy, after artillery preparation, attacked our positions in the sector northwest of the Buzeu River, but was repelled.

Aviation—In the region of Dvinsk our aviator, Ensign Efinoff, brought down a German airplane, which fell within our lines. The aviators were made prisoners. In the region of Brody one of our machines, piloted by Aviator Lieutenant Ludnovske, engaged in an aerial battle with an enemy battle plane. Both machines fell in the enemy lines.

KERENSKY HEADS INQUIRY

Officers and Well-Known Politicians Are Said to be Involved.

THEIR NAMES KEPT SECRET

KORNILOFF TO HAVE HIS WAY

Vice Premier Denies Army's Chief Is to be Ousted—Has Government's Confidence.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 2.—The attorney of the High Court of Moscow has unearthed a counter-revolutionary, monarchistic conspiracy the design of which, according to a report presented to the Cabinet last night, was to accomplish a coup d'état by arresting the Provisional Government.

The newspapers say the plot was discovered during the meeting of the Moscow conference, the Birzhéviya asserting that the authorities first received news of it from the Council of Delegates. Many arrests have been made of officers and civilians in Moscow and the provinces, and some also in Petrograd. The names of the arrested persons the authorities for the present refuse to divulge, but the leaders are said to include well-known politicians.

It appears that the headquarters of the conspirators was the villa district outside of Petrograd. A search of various houses in the capital led to proofs of the existence of the plot.

Most of the arrests effected were outside of Petrograd, says a statement from an authorized source today. No alarming facts, it is said, were disclosed in the unearthing of the activities of the plotters.

A conference of representatives of the army committees at Moscow has passed a resolution demanding the merciless suppression of the counter-revolutionary movement.

In an official statement made to the newspapers today, Vice Premier Nekrasoff denies all reports that there was in contemplation a movement to supersede General Korniloff, Commander in Chief of the Russian Army. On the contrary, the Vice Premier declares, the Provisional Government is in complete accord with General Korniloff, some of whose stipulations already have been carried into effect, while others are under consideration.

The Government, adds the statement, has complete confidence in General Korniloff, who keeps clear of political intrigues and maintains complete political neutrality.

Boris Savinkoff, the acting Minister of War, will shortly confer with General Korniloff regarding the measures the Commander in Chief considers imperative to prevent further disaster. To the General's telegram, in which he said he must again categorically insist that the disciplinary measures he outlined at the Moscow conference be carried out immediately, Premier Kerensky replied, saying that the measures requested had been worked out and would immediately be submitted to the Provisional Government for its consideration.

It was with only four voices in dissent, one of which was that of M. Tsereteli, former Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, that the Petrograd Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates adopted its resolution protesting against the death penalty at the front or in the rear of the lines. The resolution was proposed by the social revolutionists, who declared that the penalty of death was condemned by Socialists everywhere, and even by most democrats, its opponents holding that it tends to corrupt the population, especially those individuals in it who are directly or indirectly concerned with inflicting the penalty. Its imposition, the sponsors of the resolution held, would in reality be a means of frightening the soldiers in order to make them the slaves of the commanding officers.

The reorganization of the army, it was argued by the opponents of the death penalty, cannot be effected by its imposition, but only by making the soldiers understand that they are not required to fight for the preservation of imperialistic interests.

Because of the great shortage of flour on the southwestern front, orders have been given to commander all corn in the provinces bordering on the southwestern and Rumanian fronts.

Governament and Cossacks at Odds.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 3.—The Petrograd correspondent of The Times predicts trouble in consequence of the treatment of the Cossacks by the Provisional Government, and cites the statement that the rights and privileges of the Don Cossacks, consecrated by many centuries, have been canceled, their peculiar elective offices abolished and Government Commissioners substituted. Under this order General Kalebin, the Cossack commander, becomes a simple soldier, and after the Moscow conference, at which the anti-Cossack campaign began openly, a personal altercation occurred between Premier Kerensky and General Kalebin.

The Kuban, Terek, and Orenburg Cossacks are not yet affected by the new order, but, according to the correspondent, the blow that strikes only Cossack host must be felt by all twelve armies adhering to the Cossack League, and it is to be expected that they will not tamely submit.

DUMA HEAD ACCUSES FORMER WAR MINISTER

Puts Blame for Army's Previous Enormous Losses in Galicia on Soukhomlinoff.

PETROGRAD, Saturday, Sept. 1, (Delayed.)—At today's hearing in the trial of General Soukhomlinoff, former Minister of War, and his wife, who are charged respectively with high treason and as an accomplice in the crime, a startling denunciation of Soukhomlinoff was made by M. Rodzianko, President of the Duma, whose testimony amounted to a direct accusation against the former War Minister.

M. Rodzianko testified that even long before the war Soukhomlinoff's activity alarmed the Duma, which perceived his criminal negligence in the organization of the army. Soukhomlinoff, he said, always showed contempt for the Duma, and when the situation at the front became threatening owing to the lack of ammunition and the Duma sounded the alarm and appealed to the workers, Soukhomlinoff at first feigned great interest, but soon began to oppose a systematic resistance to the efforts of the Deputies for a betterment of conditions. This resistance aggravated the terrible situation of the army, which found itself compelled to fight without arms. In March former Grand Duke Nicholas declared that a continuation of the war under these conditions was becoming impossible.

"I then went to Galicia," said M. Rodzianko, "and what I saw there filled me with terror. I affirm that the responsibility for the enormous losses we suffered during the retreat falls entirely upon Soukhomlinoff. A Committee of Defense was created to investigate the situation and immediately established Soukhomlinoff's culpability. I then appealed to the former Czar and persuaded him to convoke the Duma and dismiss Soukhomlinoff."

M. Rodzianko's statement made a deep impression on the court.

General Savitch, an expert on the war budget, gave similar testimony, asserting that Soukhomlinoff did virtually nothing to remedy the deplorable lack of arms and ammunition.

Milukoff's Damaging Evidence.

Professor Paul N. Milukoff, former Foreign Minister, gave his impressions of an interview Soukhomlinoff had with the Cabinet and the President of the Duma. He said the overwhelming conviction of all present at this interview was that Soukhomlinoff could not assure Russia's defense, and that both before and during the war he knowingly had deceived the Russian people by declaring the army was in good shape.

M. Guchkoff, President of the third Duma, read a long statement, to the effect that as early as 1908 the Duma realized that Russia was on the eve of important events, for the reports of all the Russian military attachés agreed concerning the Austro-German war preparations. The members of the Duma also believed that if Soukhomlinoff remained in power Russia would be taken by surprise.

M. Guchkoff added that all efforts to organize an army commissariat encountered the opposition of Soukhomlinoff, "this person so fatal to Russian history." In conclusion, M. Guchkoff said Russia entered the war without the least preparation and that the fault was solely Soukhomlinoff's, who alone was responsible for all of Russia's defects.

Howitzers at a frontier fortress were without ammunition, the artillery with only sufficient shells for the sunrise and sunset salutes, and an insufficiency of rifles and small ammunition were conditions found by M. Guchkoff on his inspection trip to the front in August, 1914, according to his testimony.

Russia began the war, he said, with a poor commanding staff, no munitions, and without a plan. Only at the end of the first year did the War Department make any pretense at activity, and the activity then consisted in giving fictitious orders and receiving delegations.

"The defects in our military preparation were revealed in the first month of the war," declared the former War Minister and former Chief of the Industrial Commission. "At the time of the Lublin fighting I was convinced of this lack of preparation. I visited the fortress of Ossowetz (Russian Poland.) I found twenty-four of our best howitzers had not a single shell, that the artillery could not spare more than 100 shells for the daybreak and nightfall salutes, and that there was a general shortage in rifles.

Czar Thought All Was Well.

"I notified the legal powers of the state of affairs. One prominent man, whose name I cannot mention, said: 'What can we do? The Emperor recently remarked to me how well things were going under Soukhomlinoff.'

"At that time the Germans were laughing at us for our two shots a day. But Soukhomlinoff was fully trusted and liked by the Emperor, who would listen to no criticism."

The witness said it had appeared from the first that the Duma was not able to work in harmony with the War Minister, and also that it was clear from the beginning of the war that Russia was not ready. War plans were neglected, railway lines were neglected, the higher staff was very bad and adventurers had been placed in responsible posts. He described the efforts that had been made to procure the removal of Soukhomlinoff, the only result of which was the saddling of responsibility upon General Polivanoff, the Assistant Minister of War, (who later became Minister of War,) who was dismissed from his post.

The witness said that his attacks upon Colonel Miasoiedof of the Gendarmerie and a favorite of Soukhomlinoff, brought on a challenge to a duel in which Guchoff fired in the air "to show the man what I thought of him." The witness added that Soukhomlinoff had assisted Aischiler, the alleged director of the Austrian spy organization, to settle in Petrograd as a dealer in agricultural machinery, with agents in the Western provinces, and secure useful information.

Director Slaboshevitch of the large Maltzeff ammunition works testified that in October, 1914, when talk became general concerning the lack of ammunition at the front, the Directors of the plant authorized Manager Mamantoff to present a proposal to the Artillery Department of the War Department for supplying shells and shrapnel. Mamantoff, he said, went to the War Department, and was told that no shells were needed.

Continuing his testimony, Slaboshevitch said that conditions became steadily worse, and that the following February he again approached the War Department, offering to accept an order for shells. He sent his card to General Stoslovsky, and it was returned with a note written by General Stoslovsky stating that no ammunition was needed, and that there was no intention to place any orders for shells or shrapnel. The witness testified that he had the card photographed and distributed among members of the Duma and other public leaders. After this last repulse Slaboshevitch testified that the Maltzeff Directors did not annoy the Government further, and eventually an order for small shells was given, but not from former Minister Soukhomlinoff's department.

Similar testimony was given by Managing Director Brustorm of a large factory manufacting shells. He testified that he went to the artillery department, which refused his offer, saying: "The Russian army lacks nothing; our affairs are organized splendidly." Less than two months later Brustorm testified the manufacturers of ammunition were invited to attend a conference at which Soukhomlinoff presided as Minister of War. The former Minister, he said, made a speech appealing to the manufacturers' patriotism and setting forth the great need of ammunition of all sorts. Brustorm obtained an order for a half million light shells in October, 1915. He did, and the Directors of the plant volunteered to make another half million, but were told that they were not needed. It was General Stosiovsky who told them, the witness said, that all requirements were covered.

Defended Alleged Spies.

General Batog, now military prosecutor of the South Russia front, and holding a similar position at Kiev before the war, testified that former Minister Soukhomlinoff interested himself actively in endeavoring to protect different persons, especially officers who were accused of being German spies.

General Loukomsky testified that the former War Minister complained to him before the war of his poverty and declared that he was sending all of his income to his wife, who was then living abroad, and that he had a hard time to make ends meet. General Loukonsky said that he met the accused again after his dismissal near the end of 1915. At that time, he said, that Soukhomlinoff appeared cheerful and told the witness that he didn't mind the dismissal, because he had made speculations on the Bourse and was well provided with money.

MOSCOW CONGRESS INSPIRES NEW HOPE

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 1.—We left Moscow in the evening, her cupolas shining in the moonlight, her snug white houses asleep amid gardens of dark green.

Strange, restless, turbulent, generous Moscow! She is shorn now of her glory of the modern-time mart of Russia. Her splendid shops are half empty, long queues wait weary hours for doles of bread, and cabmen and bootblacks mock at the flimsy ruble. But something of old Moscow has come again. Church bells are ringing night and day. On Tuesday church processions marched from all quarters of the city to the Kremlin, and for two hours the ancient citadel was thronged and ablaze with prelates and priests in cloth of gold and a multitude bearing gold crosses and glittering banners. The great Church Council was opened in state. There were greetings from all the patriarchs of the East. Shadows of the past gathered over Moscow—shadows of the past or hopes of the future.

When we met at the Petrograd train it was not the Council we discussed, but the convention. Again and again I heard the phrase "a ray of hope." The delegates were actually more hopeful. The convention had yielded no definable result, and yet somehow it had created a new mood. A new impulse had been given. The power of Russia had been focused. A sense of loneliness, of isolation, of helpless exposure to hostile elements, had given place to a vague but unmistakable community of national feeling. Assurance was given that Russia was not dead, but was living still and would live.

Imagine the position. For weeks now the Russian people have been faced with the most dreadful possibilities, threatened with calamities unknown in Europe for centuries. Those possibilities are still present. The convention has not altered their outward shape or objective probability one whit. The latest news we heard in the train was as bad as ever. A fresh collapse of infantry regiments at the front, a wild outbreak of hooligan soldiers at Kazan, bad reports of food trouble from various parts of Russia, and a hundred and one of those minor events and incidents that make daily life in Russia one of perpetual unrest and strain. There was no attempt to minimize their gravity, yet I noticed in conversation a new undertone of confidence. It was as though, having faced the very worst, men had ceased to fear.

I spoke with a prominent member of the Executive Committee of the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates. He thought the convention had strengthened the position of the Government, and also, in his opinion, the position of the Council of Delegates, seeing that the co-operative societies, the delegations from the nationalities, and several Zemstvos had adopted the program read by Cheidse. I asked him whether Tseretell's forcible statement on the war would be supported by his comrades. The delegate was a little vague on this point. He thought that if the whole committee had had to frame the statement it would have been modified in certain points, but that the majority would support its substance.

Some members of the committee were, however, displeased. There was a long dispute in the corridor between members of the Council and other delegates. Several officers and a factory manager violently attacked the Council. The officers spoke of the intolerable attitude of the soldiers at the front. A young wounded Lieutenant describe the gallant attack of a death battalion which had been practically wiped out because a flanking regiment had not moved an inch to help it. The officers bitterly charged the Council with responsibility for the collapse of the army. The factory manager, nervous and overwrought, told how since April he had had to wage singlehanded a struggle with a thousand workmen.

Now, as throughout the convention, the Council delegates were on the defensive. They pleaded many excuses. They urged that there had been no create order out of chaos, and that only now results were beginning to tell. They insisted that, if it had not been for the efforts of the Council of Delegates in the army, Kerensky would never have got his offensive.

Some passengers were for shutting down all the Councils of Delegates immediately. Others were for compromise.

"I despise the Council," said one excitable young cadet, a Constitutional Democrat, "but if they can show any capacity to do real work instead of destroying as they have done, then Milukoff ought to form an alliance with them."

"What's the use of your disputing and arguing?" said a Pole contemptuously. "Do away with all your organizations and a dictator will come to rule with blood and iron."

The Council men were chastened. They had abandoned many of their illusions. They were still convinced that their councils were a necessary factor in the organization of the country, but they were anxiously looking both to the right and to the left for the Maximalists, who lay low for time and are now raising their heads again.

Tseretelli declared in the convention that the Council had at last learned how to deal with the Maximalists, and one delegate assured me that the only hope of keeping them under some control was to permit them to take part in the councils, where they were amenable to influence. If they were driven out altogether, he said, they would only grow desperate and still more dangerous.

It is worth noting that the current formula of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council now is not peace without annexation and indemnities but fight on to an honorable peace.

The argument was hot, but in the end the disputants found a common ground and shared amicably their hopes and fears. The common ground was Russia, and the great significance of the congress is that in it the idea of Russia emerged once more from the shadow.

ITALY DEMANDING TIENTSIN CONCESSION

Wants Austria's Holdings, Control of Salt Business, and Indemnity—Chinese Indignant.

PEKING, Wednesday, Aug. 29, (Delayed.)—Minister Aliotti of Italy has asked the Foreign Office to transfer the Austrian concession of Tientsin to Italy in recognition of Italy's war services. He also has asked for the employment of Italians to replace Germans in the salt administration and to indemnify the losses suffered by Italians in the bombardment of July 12. The Chinese press expresses indignation over what it characterizes as Italy's attempt to gain territory.

"If the Italian Minister," says the Peking News, "cannot understand the principle involved in the demand we shall have to tell him that China is not prepared to cede to Italy or to any other nation at the present time any part of her territory."

PEKING, Tuesday, Aug. 28, (Delayed.)—Li Yuan-hung, the former President, left today for Tientsin on a special train guarded by troops of Feng Kwo-chang, acting President. The purpose of the former President's trip is to visit his family at Tientsin. He left Peking with the understanding that he was to return in one week.

BEAT 2 GERMANS TO DEATH.

Russian Soldiers Deal with Men Who Try to Blow Up Trains.

PETROGRAD, Saturday, Sept. 1 (Delayed.)—Two foreigners, supposed to be Germans, who were discovered placing explosive cylinders on the Kiev-Voronesh Railroad were beaten and trampled to death by a mob of soldiers at Kiev when they refused to answer questions.

Seventeen cylinders which were left on the railroad track by the men exploded while children were playing with them, one boy being wounded. This caused the arrest of the foreigners, who were found to be carrying plans and secret documents, in addition to a large sum of money.

When they refused to reveal their identity or to answer questions, the soldiers attacked them.

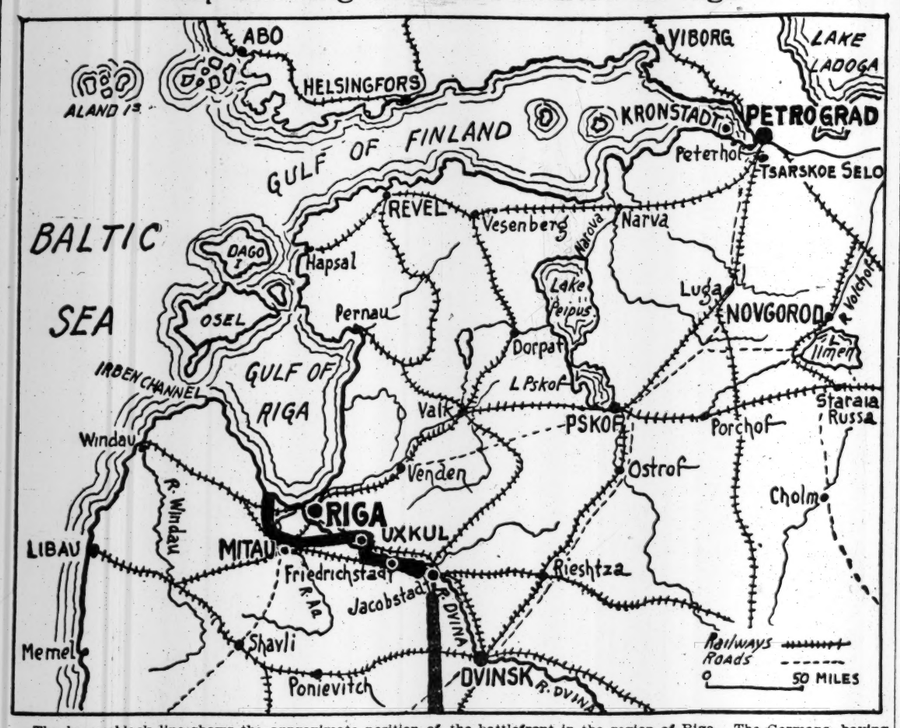
NEW BIG RAILROAD LOAN.

Engineers Defer Strike Pending Negotiations with Government.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 2.—The Union of Railroad Engineers, which decided yesterday to call a strike owing to certain of its demands not having been granted by the railway management, has decided to postpone ceasing work pending negotiations with the Government.

The newspapers announce that a second railway loan of 750,000,000 rubles will be issued next week, and that it will be taken over by a syndicate of banks. The money, it is said, will be used for the development of their properties by seventeen railway companies.

Map Showing German Advance on Riga



The heavy black line shows the approximate position of the battlefront in the region of Riga. The Germans, having broken across the River Dvina, near Uxkul, have swung north. Petrograd reports that the Russians have been unable to stop them. The invaders are also advancing from the direction of Mitau, and the capture of the port appears certain.

GERMAN PINCERS CLOSING ON RIGA

The report issued earlier in the day reads:

Front of Prince Leopold—Along the Dvina, near Smorgon and near Baranovichi, the artillery activity has increased. Southeast of Riga, at Friedrichstadt and Illukst, some of our enterprises were successful.

West of Lutsk a thrust by our storming troops resulted in the capture of prisoners and booty.

Front of Archduke Joseph—Between the Pruth and the Suchava a destructive fire was maintained, and there were some skirmishes between advanced parties.

Front of Field Marshal von Mackensen—In the mountains northwest of Fokshani the Rumanians and Russians attempted to dispute the possession by our troops of the ground they had captured. Bitter enemy counterattacks failed, with heavy losses.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—A Turkish official communication dated Saturday and received here this evening asserts that the Turks have driven the Russians out of Merivan, Persia.

SEES PEACE HOPE IN WILSON'S NOTE

Nation's Defense Would Not Suffer.

Having argued, says the correspondent, that the German people are riper now for a democratic constitutional régime than most other peoples were when they adopted it, and that national defense would not suffer from its adoption, the Vorwärts goes on to emphasize President Wilson's declaration that he in principle is ready to negotiate with authorized representatives of the German people. The Vorwärts is then quoted as saying:

"The authorized representatives of the German people are the Reichstag members, chosen on the basis of a democratic franchise. What is lacking is a government responsible to the people's representatives such as is in existence in all other countries.

"Are we Germans to admit that other people cannot treat with us because we are not in a position to make our own will effective? Do we deserve that after years of battles, achievements and sacrifices without measure and number?

"All the greater, then, is the responsibility of those whom the people have called to be its representatives in the Reichstag. Heffcon who attributes to this most patient of Parliaments a mere vain lust for power. This Reichstag has never wished for power, but it now wishes it because its commander, the German people, demands this from it, and because its way to power is the way of the world to peace."

The Vorwärts article with its frank admission that the Entente is not beyond its rights in demanding a democratic Government for Germany is likely to give a new turn to the whole discussion yet to come on the Entente's answer to the Pope.

Otherwise the leading articles in the German press are a repetition of worn-out phrases and abuse.

Should Take Good Advice.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 2.—The Socialist newspaper Vorwärts furnishes a striking exception to the general condemnation of President Wilson's note in the German press. It demands that the nation take good advice, regardless of its source, and introduce the real democratic reforms which constitute the preliminary conditions for any chance of negotiating peace. Vorwärts misses in the note, it says, proof of an absence of hostility to the German people which could be furnished by the announcement of a determination that they should not be robbed or made to pay tribute to their enemies. The note, it says, glides cautiously over this point, which is of decisive importance to the German people, neither supporting the wishes of the Allies for conquest and compensation nor expressly disavowing them.

It regards the language of the note, however, as clear on the point that negotiations are impossible so long as the present governmental system continues and in demanding guarantees that the will of the Government be backed by the will of the people.

"A certain section of the German press," continues the Socialist organ, "will hasten to declare that it is unworthy of the German people to give such guarantees. We believe the contrary. It would be unworthy of it to refuse them.

"For the Social Democracy it is a simple matter, of course, that the Governments in concluding peace incorporate into their acts the will of their peoples, and be supported by their peoples' confidence."

Vorwärts declares that the German people are more than ripe for democratic government. The peace settlement, it says, may be wrecked on the terms of the negotiations, but must not be wrecked on the question of who shall negotiate.

Other Papers Assail Vorwaerts.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 2.—The Vorwärts is being vigorously belabored by journals like Tägliche Rundschau, Kreuz Zeitung, and Cologne Gazette for its attitude on President Wilson's note.

The Tägliche Rundschau thinks it almost unbelievable of a German paper to thus reply "to the shameless impudence of President Wilson." It adds that to want to make "a Wilson judge and arbiter over German affairs is ridiculous."

The Kreuz Zeitung says:

"Social Democracy's attitude tends to damage or weaken the German defense or otherwise how could it "Go hand in hand with President Wilson, one of the most bitter enemies we have."

That newspaper terms the accusations brought against the German Government madness, which it says can only be laughed at, but adds that the British propaganda has so prepared the ground in the United States that "such absurdities do not meet with mocking laughter."

The Cologne Gazette's Berlin correspondent says that if the remarks of the Vorwärts had not been printed the people would refuse to believe that "such a blind ideologist existed." The correspondent proceeds to draw a picture of the peace-loving monarchies of Central Europe as contrasted with the clique-ridden, bellicose, and oppressive democracies.

In a second article on Wilson's reply the Cologne Gazette endeavors to prove inconsistency by comparison with his peace note of December, 1916. It goes to much trouble to emphasize the zeal of the Germans in carrying out reforms that it says ensured success, and asserts that problems are now offered as the latest novelty from Paris, London, and New York which were weighed in all their phases by the Germans over a century ago, when the Germans were still a people of poets and thinkers.

The Frankfurter Zeitung terms the declaration in favor of equal participation in the economic possibilities of the world for all peoples the only clear and unmistakable passage in President Wilson's answer to the Pope's peace proposal. After following the fashion of using the Russian General Soukhomlinoff's declarations to refute President Wilson's assumption that Germany was the aggressor, the paper asks where is the freedom of peoples and the right of self-determination in his attitude toward Germany, and continues:

"There is no worse enemy of German democracy than Wilson himself and his Entente comrades. The entire German people agree that all reforms must change at the command or under pressure of foreign States are impossibilities. Moreover, if our enemies think democratic reforms in Germany would be of any use to them, they have entirely deceived themselves. In all essential points the German people are one with their Government, precisely in the policy that directly preceded and that has been followed during the war. The Government has for forty-three years pursued a peace policy, and a democratic Government in Germany would pursue no other.

"This Government has for a year past declared its readiness to make peace, and a month ago the new Chancellor associated himself with a program of peace by agreement and reconciliation among the peoples. The elected representatives of the German people have made the same profession, but, strangely enough, Wilson does not mention these things. Wilson, Lloyd George or Poincaré would be happier if they were conscious of having such a large part of the people's will behind them as the Imperial German Government. In none of the enemy lands does more democracy really obtain today than in Germany. What the leaders of the Entente have in mind is not a democratic, but a debilitated Germany.

"It cannot unequivocally be told from this first reply what direction the Entente really means to take. The Entente would, perhaps, be content, as also is deducible from the President's note, if the agreements of the German Government were supported by 'public expression of the will and intention of the German people.' In that case the Pope might respond: 'Gentlemen, this guarantee has already been given you by Germany's Government and Parliament, who have both declared for peace of agreement and conciliation.'"

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 2.—The National-Zeitung, a National Liberal organ, referring to the President's offer to negotiate with a responsible Government and for the publication of peace terms, says:

"In spite of appearances to the contrary, Wilson's note presents possibilities for negotiations. It asserts that it is the business of the Reichstag to consider these conditions in the German answer.

Count zu Reventlow, in the Tageszeitung, says that President Wilson's reply to the Pope is a direct appeal to the German democracy and the Social Democrats to increase their power in every way, and an appeal to the Reichstag majority to continue on the same path. These tactics, he says, may be traced all through the note, which always returns to the status quo and the Scheidemann-Erzberger peace—an idea which we do not share."

The writer says it is unnecessary to state that Wilson and Lansing do not mean the present Chancellor, Dr. Helfferich, or Dr. Spahn, but the monarchical system, when they talk of the German Government, and that this President Wilson has often repeated. The gist of the whole document, he says, is to encourage the Social Democrats in the idea that "if they led German policy Germany would be able to make a status quo ante peace."

Such a peace, he says, would spell ruin for Germany. He is sure that General Pershing's recent report (evidently referring to a "fake" circulated in Germany) undoubtedly had an effect on the note, and that one could feel it lurking in such phrases as "Germany is not yet defeated." "We," says the Count, "Germany is undefeated; so America turns all the more persistently to the Social Democrats in Germany, so that the undefeated, undefeatable German power may be undermined from within and overthrown"; and he closes by saying: "Our only strengthen the pseudo-majority our enemies support it. That is what they are angling for, and it should be fully exposed."

"Rise of a Free Germany."

ZURICH, Sept. 2.—The Münchener Post complains of the difficulty of being just in the face of the "inflammatory tone" of President Wilson's note, and thinks that it was manifestly written under the influence of bitterness caused by certain diplomatic occurrences preceding the rupture between Germany and the United States.

The Post condemns "the inconceivably foolish proceedings of Zimmermann and other irritating incidents of the German-American conflict," and concludes:

"President Wilson sees in the present-day Germany no security for peace based on freedom and justice. We can only ask: Have the dramatic events of last month, the rise of a new, free, and democratic Germany, with a program of peace by agreement, through international tribunals and the democratization of empires, completely escaped his notice?"

PAN GERMAN PAPERS VIOLENT IN CRITICISM

Most of German Press Admit Wilson "Guarantees" Demand Is Vital.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 2, (via London.)—Reviewing German press comment on President Wilson's answer to the Pope, the Tageblatt says:

"Wilson, through the pen of Lansing, has rejected peace mediation by Benedict XV. On that point the German press, as far as can be judged at this hour, seems unanimous. But most papers are of the opinion that Wilson is trying to open a door for peace by demanding guarantees supported by the apparent expression of will and intention by the people themselves.'

"It is to this supposition [Voraussetzung—hypothesis?] for peace negotiations which really forms the kernel of Wilson's seditious note that German papers pay most attention. The Pan-German papers make short shrift of it, declaring the note absolutely obnoxious and abominable, since it demands, in their opinion, the overthrow of the Hohenzollern dynasty, while the organs of the Left can see no such demand on Wilson's part and, like Vorwärts, think all that is necessary is the speedy parliamentarization of the German Governments. This, at least, is the essence of Vorwärts article."

The Zeitung-am-Mittag says:

"Wilson makes his confidence dependent on the popular manifestation and creation of a Government by the people. It is left to party opinion to interpret what he means by this—reform or revolution. Wilson probably leaves us purposely in the dark so as not to tie himself down to the impossible, but he leaves no doubt that this is the kernel of the peace question. If this supposition was answered satisfactorily America would come out unreservedly for a complete and just conciliation of nations. The rudeness of tone is probably meant to mask the beginning of a retreat. Of course, Wilson speaks entirely for America, and some of his thrusts seem aimed at the former war aims of his own allies, and are most likely recognized as such in the camps of London and Paris. Now we must await answers by the Entente nations. It should turn out that Wilson had acted only as peacemaker for them, then we may without fear of contradiction talk of a general retreat of the Entente. In that case Wilson's note is but a signal for flight into ideal spheres, since the material aims of the Entente can no longer be accomplished. In that case it is a simple reconnoissance for a 'moral success' that must take the place of the unaccomplishable final victory.

"We must postpone our final verdict on Wilson's note also for another reason. We must first read the original, because the various translations show many mutilations and mistakes. Our attitude toward the Pope's note, as it will be formulated by the newly appointed committee of seven members of the Reichstag, in conjunction with the Chancellor and the Bundesrat, and that of our allies can in no way be influenced by Wilson's note. No exterior effort or force can swerve us from the line of our peace aims and reforms, which we have decided upon our own impulse."

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 2.—The German press has received from the Wolff Bureau, the semi-official news agency, a substantially complete and correct version of President Wilson's reply to Pope Benedict's peace note. The agency transcript differs from the original only in minor points, such as apparently are due to errors in transmission or translation. There is no indication of an intent to alter the text or withhold any part of it from the public.

The minor differences noted are these: The German version speaks of "no barrier, either of law or of truth," instead of "no barrier or conspiracy," and of an "undeceived, but undefeated," instead of a "balked, but undefeated" Germany, and of the counter revolution which would be "caused," instead of "attempted" by malign influences. The sentence beginning "responsible statesmen" is badly dislocated in an attempt to force it into the complicated mold of German syntax; the phrase "punitive damages" is translated into "damage as punishment," while "treaties of settlement" is qualified by the adjective "secret," and "reconstruction of small nations" becomes "restoration of small nations."

The original text of the passage in the President's note which is quoted in the Berlin Tageblatt reads as follows:

"We cannot take the word of the present rulers of Germany as a guarantee of anything that is to endure, unless explicitly supported by such conclusive evidence of the will and purpose of the German people themselves as the other peoples of the world could be justified in accepting."

VIENNA PRESS INDIGNANT.

Neue Freie Presse Accuses Wilson of Malignancy and Ignorance.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 2.—The Vienna Neue Freie Presse, commenting on President Wilson's note, says:

"Even an unprejudiced personal must lead to the conclusion that President Wilson's reply is the most partisan presentation imaginable. It lacks all tactics, is filled with malignity and prejudice against Germany and shows that President Wilson has no inkling, either of Germany's political institutions or the character of the German people.

"President Wilson appears to know nothing either of the isolation policy or that France is at least as militarist as Germany. He has not read that in the Soukhomlinoff trial the clearest proof has been given that the war was unchained by the military caste of Russia, even against the Czar's will. He does not know and does not want to know that by disregard of the London and Paris declarations Great Britain is responsible for the entire misfortunes at sea."

The paper further terms the note "nonsensical," adding: "For even if it were assumed that Germany had striven after world domination no one will understand why the slaughter must continue, in spite of the abolition of the alleged plan of domination."

It sees in the concluding words of the note the only ray of hope, and declares:

"Even the American people could not offer a better guarantee of treaties than the aggression of the German Parliament and Government exhibited by the Reichstag resolution and the Chancellor's acceptance thereof."

The Vienna Fremdenblatt remarks:

"The contents of President Wilson's reply are as unpalatable as the tone of the note. In most humiliating and offensive manner terms are dictated to the German people, the fulfillment of which would constitute the most humiliating intervention in the most primitive rights of the German nation."

"The Reichstag's peace resolution does not satisfy Mr. Wilson. He requires a peace revolution; he would like to transform Germany into the condition in which Russia now is, thanks to its joining the Western Powers.

"The German people, however, will give a fitting answer to this unsought benefactor, and every one, who has retained clear judgment, will recognize that the freedom Mr. Wilson preaches is nothing but subjection to America's dictation."

The Reichspost thinks Central Europe need not dwell long on the well-worn Entente reproaches. In matter itself, says the Reichspost, the note signifies an entire divergence from Entente war aims. The paper continues:

"As regards the obtrusive distinction made between the Berlin Government and the people of Germany, President Wilson, as well as the entire Entente, will in a given case learn what the German people's will is, and that its rulers' will is and can be none other. Then, too, President Wilson will have those guarantees without which a conclusion of peace appears to him to be impossible."

The Neues Weiner Tagblatt likewise summarily dismisses as threadbare the reasons which President Wilson advances for his "bellicose attitude," and says that the President, who knows only one subject, namely, new Russia out of old Germany, again and again returns to the clever idea that Germany is only defeatable when it hacks itself to pieces. The paper says the President dishonors the peace idea when he sets revolution before the highest moral authority of the Catholic world as the only means of ending the war.

The Wiener Extrablatt thinks that President Wilson may calmly leave to the German people their own liberation. For the rest, the paper will await whether America's note does not offer a possibility of further discussion of peace.

PREDICTS A NEW PEACE NOTE FROM THE POPE

Turin Paper Says He Has Hope in Wilson's Humanitarian Point of View.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Sept. 2.—As a result of particular inquiry made at the Vatican La Stampa of Turin learns that Pope Benedict, regarding President Wilson's point of view as based more broadly upon purely humanitarian motives and interests than that assumed hitherto by any other statesman of the belligerent powers, proposes to issue a direct rejoinder, with the object of elucidating the points of contact and provoking further discussion and thereby preventing the Papal effort from becoming abortive.

The effect of the President's reply in Vatican circles is to render more acute than ever two contrary courses of policy already manifest. La Stampa says that among those whom his Holiness lately consulted on the subject of his peace message was an aged ex-valet of his whom he had specially summoned to his presence. The Pope, having overcome his old servant's reluctance to make a frank statement of his impressions about the note, he finally exclaimed:

"You, my Holiness's action seems to have partly contented and partly discontented the spokesmen of every group."

"How delighted I am to hear you say that!" answered the Pontiff. "I could wish no better testimony to my absolute impartiality. Nil desperandum!"

DANES SEE LITTLE PEACE HOPE

Some of the Newspapers, However, Indorse President's Stand.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 2.—Comparatively little comment has appeared in the Danish newspapers on President Wilson's note. The Dagbladet says:

"The question as to whether the German Government declared war against the will of the people remains to be answered, but there is no doubt that Germany is now, after the Russian revolution, the only country where the Government is able to involve the country in war against the people's will.

"The attempt to create real world peace can only be built up on conditions which make war against the people's will impossible. The American note draws the correct deduction that peace cannot be concluded with the German Government so long as it is chosen by the Kaiser and does not represent the people or their will."

Continuing, the paper declares that one of the greatest obstacles to peace is the failure of the German people to take over the sovereign power, which in the course of time has come to rest in autocratic hands, and to create a representative organ to enforce its will. The paper asks: How can this be imposed from the outside?

The Fyen Stifts-Tidende, leading Conservative organ, says that there is not the slightest ground to believe that the German people will fulfiu the Entente hope and overthrow the present system, "because they know well that just this system made it so mighty." The Russian revolution, the newspaper says, also provides a deterrent example against the overthrow of the established Government.

The Stifts-Tidende dislikes the idea of the absolute supremacy of one group or the other, which would result if either side emerged the absolute victor. It grants, however, that peace now on the basis of status quo ante will bring on the next war much quicker than if this war should be fought on to a finish.

TURKEY TO ANSWER POPE.

Reply to be Delivered with the Response of Other Central Powers.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 2.—A Constantinople dispatch states that the attitude of the Porte toward the Papal peace note is a very receptive one. The Turkish reply, it is stated, probably will be delivered in a few days, simultaneously with the responses of the Central Powers.

WANTS FRANCE TO FOLLOW.

Deputy Will Ask That Reply Like Wilson's Be Made to Pope.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Frederic Brunet, Deputy from the Seine District, announces the intention of submitting an interpellation in the Chamber of Deputies demanding that France answer Pope Benedict's peace note in the spirit of President Wilson's reply.

"I find President Wilson's answer perfect," said the Deputy, "and I wish to see it countersigned by all the allied Governments."

POPE SUFFERS FROM FATIGUE.

Labors Arduous Since He Began Peace Efforts—Suspends Audiences.

ROME, Saturday, Sept. 1.—Pope Benedict's labors have been so arduous lately, especially since the receipt of President Wilson's reply to the peace note, that he was feeling very fatigued today, and all audiences were suspended.

CRITICISM OF WILSON BY ROME NOT LIKED

Vatican Organs' Complaint That Propriety Was Violated Declared to be Baseless.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Criticism from Rome that President Wilson violated diplomatic propriety in permitting Secretary Lansing to sign the President's response to the Pope's peace offer does not accord with the view of some of those in Washington who are familiar with diplomatic usages. In the absence of Secretary Lansing, who is away for the holiday, there is no authoritative statement obtainable from the State Department, but it is pointed out that the response, while signed by the Secretary of State, was plainly written in the words of President Wilson and was his own reply to the Pope.

Concerning the criticism that the President was guilty of another discourtesy in permitting the publication of his response "prematurely," it is pointed out that the President's answer was filed for cabling on Aug. 27, the date it bears, and was not published in the American press until the morning of Aug. 29. It has been customary for this Government to give to the press diplomatic communications relating to the war as soon as sufficient time had elapsed to permit delivery to the Government to which addressed. The text of the Pope's note to the belligerents reached this country in press dispatches from London before the official note was delivered to the State Department.

It has been suggested that this Government, while refusing to accept the Pope's suggestions, showed an eagerness for peace in having a copy of the President's response sent to Berlin through the Spanish Government, which represents American interests in Germany. This was done to enable the German Government to know the President's attitude at the earliest practicable moment.

If the German Government desired to give the President's reply to the Pope to the press of the empire it would have no excuse, with an official copy at hand, to permit an incorrect and mutilated version of the President's expressions to reach the German public. The State Department is waiting to learn whether the full text of the response was printed in German newspapers and in correct form. If the text was garbled the response will be translated into German and thousands of copies of it dropped in the German trenches and in German cities by British and French airmen.

The criticism that this Government was guilty of another discourtesy in telegraphing the President's answer instead of sending it all the way from Washington to Rome by special courier is regarded as silly.

It is expected that when Secretary Lansing returns he will resent the attempt to make it appear that President Wilson was guilty of discourtesy toward the Pontiff. All that is known of the attitude of the Government shows that it was actuated by the most sincere appreciation of the Pope's dignity and responsibility.

GERMANS AGAIN DROP POISON CANDY IN FRANCE

Harvard Man Writes That Many Children Were Killed by It Recently Near Rheims.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Sept. 2.—German airmen, flying by night over a French town near Rheims recently, dropped poison candy, causing the death of many children who ate it, according to a letter from Brownlee Benzel Gauld, a former Harvard University student, who is now driving an ambulance on the western battle front.

The communication was made public today by his father, the Rev. F. J. Gauld of Toledo, Ohio, who is spending the Summer here. The letter also states that the "Germans are continually shelling hospitals." The young man told his father that he had received the Cross of War from the French Government.

Serbs Are Restless Over Our Attitude Toward Their Most Hated Foe.

RUSSIAN DICTATOR SOUGHT

Exiles in Switzerland Think Kerensky Too Much of a Politician to Succeed.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

BERNE, Aug. 10.—I got some sidelights on Balkan internal affairs today. Those who sympathize with Serbia are extremely restless over the toleration of Bulgaria by England and America. It is a curious thing that, while Serbia and Bulgaria are both Slav and have the same religion, they hate each other almost more than any other combatants. The Serbs think that it is the greatest mistake to treat with Bulgaria separately: they say that that country is in sympathy as much German as Bavaria, that she is the Prussia of the Balkans and if there should be an inconclusive peace Bulgaria would organize trouble within a few years.

A particular cause of irritation is the retention of the Bulgarian Minister at Washington. The incumbent, it seems, was a professor in Robert College at Constantinople before the war, and his retention and the maintenance of relations with Bulgaria are referred here to the influence of Americans who are interested in Robert College. "It is a great blunder," they tell me, "to keep the minister there on the theory that he is a nice, friendly college professor. For the purpose of injuring America in every possible way he is Bulgaria, and Bulgaria is Germany, and Germany is the Kaiser."

I met today an old singe-cat politician from America who had spent some years in Germany in an official position. "If you figure on any democratization in Germany in time to affect the decision of this war, you will be beautifully left," he said. "You've got to lick Germany or they'll lick you. There's no middle ground. This is a fight for a crown, or several crowns; for all the old power, and then some. The Kaiser is gambling with other people's money, and nothing will stop him short of winning it all in this effort to conquer the world.

"The discussion of liberalization inside Germany is predicated on conditions that exists in America, England, and France. But these conditions do not exist in Germany. The Germans were mostly in a state of serfdom previous to 1848. What they have enjoyed under Kaiserism is so good by comparison that they are satisfied. Germany is a country which in its relation to its rulers can be compared to two other nations or races. As Confucius was to China, as Moses was to Israel, so is the Hohenzollern, from Frederick the Great down, to Germany.

"The trouble with long-distance opinion," continued my friend, "is that it ignores the all-important element of background, antecedents, local conditions. We judge Prussia, we judge Germany, in terms of American individuality and democracy. The political tyranny and abuse that our people would wake up to and throw off in a month, the Germans will stand for another century. So go to work fixing the submarines and transporting an army; the treaty of peace must be signed somewhere in the vicinity of Berlin."

Pitiful Stories of Refugees.

BERNE, Aug. 12.—The American Legation at Berne is a nodal point. Every day refugees are here from some place in the near Orient, making their way homeward to America. This morning I saw a Jewish woman who was at the head of a party of thirty—thirteen women and seventeen children—who were en route from Jerusalem. She was an American born, she said, the wife of an east side rabbi in New York. She went to Jerusalem some years ago to be with her parents, who had grown old and needed her, but her husband continued to support her. Her parents had died. A few months ago a party was made up to flee from the typhus-cursed and poverty-ridden city and go home to America. It had taken five weeks to go from Jerusalem to Constantinople. The party had traveled by train, automobile, horse cart, and on foot, making their way as best they could, and largely by their own wits. They had to wait six weeks in Constantinople, and then came here by a circuitous route. They were traveling on funds furnished by Jewish charitable societies. They will sail from Bordeaux for New York.

I met one of the many refugees from Armenia who are passing through. Their stories are too terrible to accept without some authentication. They report the most unthinkable butchery of the Armenian population by the Turks. The figures they give are more than 70 per cent. of killed in the whole population. The roads are strewn with dead bodies. On the roadsides the jackals from the mountains, grown tame by usage, are constantly busy with the human carrion. Half-crazed women wander on the highways without a shred of clothing, and starving. The stories of maltreatment of women, including refined girls educated at Christian colleges maintained by Americans, are really too awful to believe. They make German behavior in Belgium seem restrained by contrast.

Still another visitor at the Legation had come recently from Warsaw. He brought reports of appalling conditions. All prices were so high as to be beyond the reach of the poor. It was impossible to buy clothes at all. The bread ration was less than half the bread ration in Germany. A civilian could buy two eggs a month. There was tremendous mortality among babies. Owing to the low vitality of the population, typhus was killing off the people in great numbers. The native population had grown so desperate that they had got the upper hand of the Landsturm soldiers who had been put over them and who themselves were but poorly fed, a begging soldier being not an infrequent sight. The natives were so rebellious that the German soldiers didn't have the courage to stand up to them and often suffered ill-usage at their hands.

Some Pessimistic Russians.

BERNE, Aug. 13.—I fell in with some Russians today, and was much interested in their discussion of the situation in their country. They are not optimistic. They think that it will be many a year before Russia is ready for democratic government. At present the best result for the war could be got out of the right kind of Czar. Nicholas was the wrong kind. Lacking intelligence and enlightened patriotism, power is the only thing that can hold together many countries in one country. The Czar had no love of power. If he had the chance now to be Emperor he wouldn't take any great amount of trouble to get back. If he were very good or very bad, if he loved power, if he had any sense of worldly realities, he might have saved Russia. He doubtless abdicated believing that it was best for the country, but Russians of the type I am quoting think he had no right to abdicate and by his act forfeited all claim on the loyalty of his subjects. He had taken the vow to reign; he broke it.

The Czar represented in his own personal character the vice of mental shiftlessness which is universal in the Russian bureaucracy. It is related that when the Russian Foreign Minister received the ultimatum from Tokio which resulted in the Russo-Japanese war, it was Friday night. He threw up his hands in despair and said: "It will not be possible to see his Majesty until next Tuesday, and that will be too late!" Not that his Majesty was attending to anything of importance, but his time was disposed of by some sort of routine arrangement, and the Minister knew that in no pretext could the routine be interrupted. When finally the Czar could be seen he rejected the idea of war being possible. It was many days before he could be persuaded that the Japanese war was a fact.

Once the Governor of one of the Russian provinces became entangled with the Petrograd authorities on a matter of overwhelming importance. He couldn't get it settled in treaty with the Minister of the Interior, so he undertook a long trip to the capital for an audience with the Czar. The sovereign received him most pleasantly, knowing the object of his mission. But he didn't permit him to take up the all-important subject. He knew that it would be necessary to send for Ministers and entertain perplexing considerations. So he began an animated conversation on other matters. How was his Excellency's wife? Was she interested in the Red Cross work? (The Red Cross was one of the Czar's hobbies.) She was President of the local society. Ah, the Empress would be interested! So he sent for her Majesty, and there was a great to-do about the Red Cross work in the Governor's district. When the time came for bringing the interview to an end not one word had been permitted on the Governor's real errand, and he went home with his trouble on his back.

"How about Kerensky?"

When I put that question it was like throwing a ball of yarn among a litter of kittens. Finally one of the Russians got the floor as against the others, and, to make sure of keeping it, he stood up and, making motions all the while with his hands like a Swiss bellringer, gave his analysis of the Russian situation in such a torrent of words that it was difficult to follow him.

He rated Kerensky as a shrewd politician, but without a touch of genius. He said Kerensky had himself proposed in the Duma two years ago the precise separate peace with Germany that was now so much reprobated. Kerensky was so fettered by party ties which he neither relished nor knew how to throw off that he would find it impossible to control the Russian situation. While he was playing the party game that situation would get away from him. Kerensky had encouraged the "democratic" methods in the army that now made discipline impossible. He could easily sow the seeds of insubordination, but he couldn't put things back where they were by threatening to shoot disobedient soldiers.

Brusiloff was put out on account of his popularity and strength. They were afraid he might be made military dictator. Nobody in Petrograd wants efficiency against Germany enough to take any chance of a military dictatorship. Kornilloff would probably not be Brusiloff's successor on the terms he had laid down, because the power he demanded would make him dictator. It is exactly a dictatorship that Russia needs; it would be the road to quick and sure allied victory.

The big mistake of the revolution was lack of a prepared plan. You can't throw an enormous country like Russia on its resources over night. The people had been more or less prepared on the subject of social revolution, but of politics they knew nothing. As soon as political revolution levelled down whatever powers had been standing, the social revolutionists took possession with their big following and semi-matured ideas.

"The only hope of Russia's coming back and presenting a solid front on the side of the Allies lies in a military dictatorship." That was the last word I heard.

SPURS FRENCH LABOR TO RENEWED ZEAL

Minister of Munitions Says Military Victory Must Win Lasting Peace.

WARNS AGAINST DOUBT

Cites Russia's Recognition of the Necessity of Destroying Prussian Militarism.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Albert Thomas, the Minister of Munitions, in addressing the workmen of the Renaud establishment of Billancourt yesterday evening, made a passionate appeal for the "continued and intense application" of their efforts during the remainder of the war.

"Comrades," he said, "at present there is a little uncertainty in the spirits of the workingman. I know the troublous propaganda that affects you. I appreciate the anguish of the worker when in the fatigue of the evening he reviews his effort and says to himself: 'Is it worth while? What will come of all this hard work? How much longer must we struggle? Isn't it true that victory is a long way off?'

"I know well that a little doubt is capable of affecting your stoutness of heart. You know me, comrades! I am one of those who desires by every possible means, by diplomatic action, by socialistic, to attain as rapidly as possible a durable and a just peace. But in order that the peace be durable, in order that the 'Society of Nations' may guarantee that peace shall be established in the entire world, do you not feel, as your comrades of the trenches feel, that military victory must be assured?

"Comrades, we have just greeted the Russian revolution. It inspired hope in hastening the hour of peace. It awaited, anxiously turning toward Berlin and Vienna, a German or an Austrian revolution which would bring to Europe peace with added liberty. The Russian revolution has discovered, after several months, that it was indispensable to destroy Prussian militarism and to pursue military efforts. At this very hour Premier Kerensky is making an appeal for war with all the energy of the Russian people, while General Korniloff is attempting to co-ordinate all the military forces of the nation. The great American Republic also has recognized that it was indispensable to conduct a war against the brutal force of the Central Empires.

"And we also must ask that the French working classes continue wholeheartedly and with unity of spirit their energetic labor—that is, that they multiply their efforts in order that tomorrow with its military victory may bring likewise an enduring victory for labor—the economic victory that you so much wish for as yours."

JOINT ACTION ON PENSIONS.

British Propose That Allies Form a Bureau for Mutual Aid.

LONDON, Aug. 20. (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Establishment of a bureau of information for the mutual benefit of all the Entente Allies to deal with questions relating to pensions, training and employmnt of men disabled in the war, is proposed in a report submitted to the British Minister of Pensions by Sir Arthur G. Boscawen as the result of a conference of representatives of the allied nations concerning the care to be taken of disabled soldiers and sailors.

Sir Arthur pointed out that in France and Belgium no soldier was discharged from the army until his cure had been completed so that there was no danger of his returning to work before he was fit to do so.

The highest pension paid to British privates at present amounts to nearly $7 a week, while the highest French pension is about $3.75 a week.

SERB GOVERNMENT PLANS TO RETURN

Prepares for Moving Back to the Balkans, with a Stop at Saloniki First.

ARCHIVES LOST IN FLIGHT

America's Advance of Five Million Francs a Month Stirs Deep Official Gratitude.

CORFU, Island of Corfu, Aug. 6, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The Serbian Government is preparing to move its entire government establishment back to the Balkans, going first to Saloniki and later to a point on Serbian soil near Monastir. The Greek Government has granted the request for the establishment of the Serbian administration at Saloniki, and King Peter, Crown Prince Alexander, and several of the Cabinet Ministers are now installed there.

There is much sentiment about this shift of Serbia back to its native soil. Since their tragic flight before the invading hordes from the north King, Regent, and Government have found a temporary asylum on this island. They have lived simply, and the whole establishment has been in a modest building formerly used as a hotel. The royal apartments and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs occupied the first floor, while the Finance, Interior, and other Ministries were on upper floors. The French military authorities of the island have given every aid, and yet the Serbians have constantly longed to be back on their own soil.

This shift of a Government back to the Balkans does not involve much moving of government property, for practically everything was lost in the flight before the invader. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Paschitz, told the writer that all the foreign archives were lost or abandoned during the exodus, and that not one of the old treaties or papers still existed. Even the precious secret treaty between Serbia and Greece, on which Serbia depended for united Balkan action against the Central Powers, was lost in the whirl of flight. So that the Foreign department has had to begin all over again and piece together something like a record of Serbia's foreign relations.

The Minister of Finance was more fortunate and managed to save most of the financial archives. What was of most importance, he saved the Government treasure, amounting to several million dollars, which was sent to Marseilles and finally landed in a Paris bank.

The Minister of the Interior has gone to Saloniki and is laying out the extensive work of reconstructing the new Serbia, for the Serbs confidently look forward to reoccupying their old territory and building up a new and greater State. The Minister has outlined plans for reconstructing the railways and bridges, most of which have been ruined by war operations, and for rebuilding the towns and cities.

The Minister of Education is also hard at work trying to hold together the scattered remnants of young Serbia. Thousands of refugee Serb children have been gathered up in France and England, and Serbian Professors have been provided for them in order that Serb teaching and traditions might be maintained and the youth of Serbia preserved from being swallowed up in the general disaster which has overcome the country.

The American Government's advance of 5,000,000 francs a month, or 60,000,000 francs a year, has come at an opportune moment to permit the authorities here to carry on their work of relief and reconstruction. All Government revenues had virtually come to an end. There were no receipts from customs or internal revenue, nothing from the Government postal and telegraph system which was in the hands of the enemy, no property of any kind to tax, and no people capable of paying taxes. And so the American help was essential and came in the nick of time. All the Serbian officials express their deepest sense of gratitude for what the United States has done for them, both in this advance and in the vast amount of private relief sent earlier in the war.

H. Percival Dodge, the newly appointed American diplomatic representative to the Serbian Government, has arrived with his family, and has had his first audiences with the officials. They are glad to have this direct relation re-established with the United States, and over our lines at an altitude of more than 5,000 meters, was hit by a shell fired by Post 66 and crashed to the ground, some kilometers from Souilly.

The official communication issued tonight reads:

There was great artillery activity in the region of Hurtebise, near Maisons de Champagne, and on the Verdun front, in the sectors near Hill 304, Samogneux and Beaumont.

BERLIN, Sept. 2, (via London.)—The report from General Headquarters says that in the Aisne region the French retained possession at the end of the fighting at Hurtebise Farm of a small portion of the German front line.

The official statement says:

Front of the German Crown Prince—Near Allemant, northeast of Soissons, heavy sanguinary losses were inflicted upon the enemy, and some prisoners were captured in the course of a powerful reconnoisance. On the Chemin des Dames Ridge, at the close of the fighting at Hurtebise Farm, a small portion of our foremost line remained in the hands of the French.

Before Verdun the artillery engagements did not increase in intensity until evening. There was a slackening during the night.

Baron von Richthofen yesterday achieved his sixtieth aerial victory.

Near the Quentin and on the Oise the artillery activity increased. About mid-day a reconnoitring thrust west of La Fère resulted in the capture of some prisoners.

RAID BULGAR LINES.

British, French, and Italian Troops Break Into Foe's Positions.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Concerning operations on the Macedonian front the War Office today issued the following statement:

Eastern theatre, Sept. 1: Between the Vardar and Lake Doiran the British troops have carried out several surprise attacks, in the course of which they took about ten prisoners. East of Dobropolje the fighting continues with varying results. Around the positions conquered on Aug. 30 by the Serbians, northeast of Monastir and at the Cerna bend, there has been violent artillery action.

ROME, Sept. 2.—The following bulletin was issued by Army Headquarters today:

In Macedonia on Friday, in conjunction with other contingents of the allied army in the east, our troops after short artillery preparation raided the summit of Hill 1,050 in the bend of the Cerna, capturing some score of German soldiers.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—The subjoined report was given out today by the War Office:

Macedonian front: Near Monastir the French attacked with strong forces. Along the road to Prilep the enemy troops who penetrated into our lines were either wiped out or made prisoner. The assault, made laterally to the road, was everywhere repulsed by the Bulgarians. Fresh attacks by the Serbians on Dobropolj broke down.

To Teach German Mothers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 2, (via London.)—The German Society for the Welfare of the Population has decided to establish a school for mothers in Leipsic which shall serve as a model for a large number of similar schools to be opened in all large German cities. In these schools young wives will be taught all maternal duties, including the rudiments of pedagogics and the science of raising healthy children.

ALMEREYDA AND LENINE LINKED IN TEUTON PLOT

Paris Says Both Were Directed from the Same Spy Centre in Switzerland.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The Almereyda affair is thought here to be paralleled by the operations of Lenine in Russia. Activities of both were directed from the German espionage head centre in Switzerland. Both used German money in the interest of Germany by working on the masses through subsidized newspapers and clandestine pamphlets.

In both Russia and France there existed a group of persons who were agitating for an early peace for one reason or another, and countenanced the Lenine and Almereyda activities, perhaps without approving them, because they tended toward the same object as their own.

Almereyda and the affiliated journalists were members of a "republican league," the foundation of which, with Caillaux as President, was announced with a flourish of trumpets about two months ago. So were many of the staff of Le Pays, which since its birth at the beginning of June has been administering cleverly prepared and homoeopathic doses of pacifism, largely from the hand of Victor Basch, a naturalized Austro-Hungarian.

Further evidence that the different threats of German plotting radiate from the same centre was given today by M. Clemenceau in the form of extracts from a self-styled French paper recently founded at Barcelona with the same title as Lenine's Petrograd organ, The Truth. Clemenceau gives the principal headlines in a late issue of that paper. They were: "What Malvy Ought to Have Replied to Clemenceau," "Parliament's Failure," "Wilson has to Reckon with Five Millions of Enemies at Home," "The Russian Debâcle," "The Decline of England," and "The Man of the Day—Caillaux."

ITALIANS EXTEND GAINS ON CARSO

Trieste again was visited by Italian airmen yesterday. They dropped seventy bombs.

On the Isonzo front there was no fighting on a large scale yesterday. Partial attacks were made by the Italians on the Bainsizza-Heiligegehast plateau, near Gorizia and near Jamiano. These were repulsed by the enterprises carried out by our storming troops, which were successful. In the region of Monte San Gabriele our guns kept down the Italian infantry.

During Saturday night 10 officers and 350 men belonging to six Italian regiments fell into the hands of our brave defenders.

DASH UP GABRIELE'S SLOPES.

Italian Attack on Mountain Barrier Had Picturesque Element.

By PERCEVAL GIBBON.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY, Aug. 31.—The battle is swelling southward, eating Austria's strength as it goes. General Boroevic has ten divisions opposed to General Cappello's Second Army, of which a fair proportion consists of mountain troops. His line in the extreme north has been broken. He has fallen back upon such country as impedes our advance. There the land, that lies like a pane of splintered glass, is a mere disorder of rocks and gullies overgrown with a sparse growth of pine and fir and broken by hollows as arbitrary and unforeseeable as the dolinas upon the Carso.

The Austrians there are making as desperate a resistance as they may. Opposite Tolmino and its bridgehead there is the Twenty-first Division. Next southward lies the Seventeenth Mountain Brigade with reinforcement of nine various battalions, and then next and still southward there are appearances of the Twenty-fourth Division, which seems lately to have replaced the Twenty-first Division of Schutzen, whose wrecked remnants exist as a reserve. They stand near the village of Kal, northeast of the Bainsizzi Plateau, and are supplemented with an extra brigade consisting of the Sixty-fourth and Thirty-seventh Regiments of Schutzen. I could also quote the rest of the enemy's formation, but the only point worth noting is that a mysterious division, whose presence on the front had not been established, has furnished prisoners to the Italians, namely the Fifty-second, which consists of Transylvanians recently transported from the Russian front.

The Austrian divisions which held and defended San Gabriele were the Fifty-eighth and Fourteenth. These last took their due defeat yesterday. The Italians came up the hill at them from that great, almost circular, hollow between Monte Santo and the main bulk of Monte San Gabriele, which is known as the Conca di Gargaro. To attack they had a slope of one in three to ascend against machine gun fire, and every obstacle which the elaborate military science of the Austrians, a military people who stand foremost in the science of war, could devise.

A Mighty Choir Invisible.

I had stationed myself with a colleague at a point whence the actual advance up the hill was invisible. I saw only the fury of the shelling, with black, rose, and white, and emerald green shell smokes mixing in chromatic cadences, while the thunder of the great trench mortars, the roar of the guns, and the echo of bursting shells made the choir. The great hololw of Gargaro belched its condensed tides of noise out over the saddle of Dol, between Santo and Gabriele, a mile wide trumpet magnifying the uproar of the battle. It was an appalling Apocalyptic note of Gabriel's trumpet. There were moments in that ecstacy of gunnery when the mountains sang together as if they themselves were at war.

The summit of Gabriele is razed bare as an egg. The brown line of a trench strays up to its crown and rubble of stone from one of the walls which the pauper peasants of these parts gather and pile from the hostile earth so poor in anything but stone, wanders over it to withhold sheep and goats. It does not stop the Italians, though.

Suddenly an apparition of shooting stars they came tumbling over the skyline into view, men whom the stuttering machine guns had not stopped. I saw them spread on the burned earth shaping their formation for the final attack upon the trench. They twinkled as they moved as the sun glanced on the goggles of their officers herding them into shape, and they surged forward at the trench. Most of them went straight at it, and, gathering their feet like athletes, leaped the parapet and went forth with out of sight to go to work with their bayonets.

The bombers, however, held back. They ran up and down the parapet, hurling their grenades as they ran, till up came the prompt Austrian shells which are always reserved for the infantry, and, one by one, still bombing, they leaped into the trench. For some seconds there was not a man visible. Then suddenly men came spouting forth from back of the trench and went leaning and tumbling down the precipitous hillside toward the curly mountain road that leads to Salcano, the northernmost suburb of Gorizia. It was a rock and little precipice all the way, and they took it, so to speak, in their stride while shells frothed and spouted around them. As soon as they reached the road they started to run and never ceased to run till Salcano opened its arms to them. They were Austrians who had surrendered at the first assault, racing the shellfire, out of labor and peril, out of war in general.

First and Last Counterattack.

It was half an hour later that the first and last counterattack showed over the shoulder of the hill. I was able to agree with a British officer, who was also watching that the enemy, Hungarians probably, came forward as viciously as you would want to see. There was a line of them, well scattered, coming not too fast, but coming all the same. They showed all together at a breach in the stone wall, and surged through toward the trench. The Italian rifles began their broken pattering, but at the same moment the mountain guns and field batteries which had been warned for this particular duty sailed into action.

It was as neat as a thing done by Machinery. Bang, bang, and then a succession of bangs as rapid as a trill on a piano, and a score of dainty little guns were on the job. Two and three inch shells leaped into flame and smoke like geysers upon the very forehead of the attack, and it vanished from sight in a storm of smoke and fire flashes. It was as though the guns had walked over it and stamped it out as a gardener might tread out an ant's nest. It lasted only a minute, and when the smoke of the shell explosions traveled away there remained no attack only a mess of shapes on the earth, and, according to my counting, five men, three of whom bolted back looking at that distance like agitated insents, while two hurled themselves forward, their hands held high, in token of surrender, and tumbled themselves into the trench, where captivity and safety awaited them.

San Gabriele is a mountain which looks directly south on the San Marco range of hills, which contains and threatens Gorizia on the east. This, therefore, is the southern buttress of the great battle which is unfolding itself in the north. The word defense has a cogency now which it never had before. Once upon a time the Austrians fought us, but now they are defending themselves.

FRENCH HOLD GAINS ON THE AISNE FRONT

Germans Admit Their Failure to Retake Trenches Northwest of Hurtebise.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Additional attempts were made by the Germans last night to retake the positions captured by the French northwest of Hurtebise, on the Aisne front. French gunfire broke up the attacks, the War Office announced this afternoon, and artillery activity in that sector was intense throughout today.

The text of the afternoon report follows:

On the Aisne front the two artilleries maintained a very lively activity during the night. Attempted surprise attacks on our posts in the Cerny region failed. Northwest of Hurtebise the Germans again counterattacked the positions which were captured on the evening of the 31st. Our gunfire, directed with precision, completely broke up the attack, the enemy being unable to approach our lines.

On the left bank of the Meuse there was intermittent activity by the artillery north of Hill 304. On the heights of the Meuse we stopped two enemy surprise attacks. The night was calm everywhere else.

Aviation: Two German airplanes were brought down by our anti-aircraft gunfire, under conditions of particular difficulty. The first machine was fired at at an altitude of 2,000 meters by our auto-cannon of the Forty-second Section and fell between Bouconville and the first lines. The second machine, which was flying

RAIN CHECKS FIGHTING ON FLANDERS FRONT

Shell-Plowed Battlefield a Swamp in Which Guns Move Slowly.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS ON THE BRITISH FRONT, Sept. 1.—Active warfare is for the moment much impeded in Flanders by wet weather. It is a queer thing that modern armies are more hampered by rain and the state of the ground than the troops in old days. All our wonderful weapons, all our progress in engineering science, and our conquest of the air are sensitive to a few heavy showers, with mist and mud.

The reason is clear enough as one sees it out here. Modern artillery so rakes up the earth which infantry has to attack that after even moderate rains it becomes a glutinous slime between ponds formed by linked shell craters, and the best troops in the world can make only slow headway through it. The guns become hard to move; it is difficult to get up supplies; bombs and rifles are likely to be choked with mud; airplanes often cannot see, so that the artillery has trouble in finding new targets; light signals do not shine through the mist, and in some places the men can hardly follow the barrage quickly enough to keep pace with it.

It is the same for the Germans as for the British, and a little worse, for they fear attack and live in a continued agony of nervous tension under greater shellfire, which does not cease, though the British infantry have scarcely anywhere moved beyond their lines for the past few days.

But as for the British fighting men in this weather, with the rain dripping from their steel helmets and their long mackintosh capes, one hears them whistling on the way, while far ahead in the long column which ends with stretcher bearers, and transport, and traveling cookers, with black smoke trailing from their slanting chimneys, the band plays a ragtime march as if war were the jolliest old game in life, with no grim death for anybody at the journey's end.

The breaking up of Summer too soon, bringing a foretaste of the discomforts and beastliness of the long wet months of the Flemish Winter, is a disappointing and tragic thing, but they make the best of it, as they have made the best of all conditions in which they have lived, even in the worst of times, as they are marching along the roads toward the lines.

The scene of battle looks grim under these rainclouds. Yesterday I walked a little way down the Menin road beyond the stricken city of Ypres. There was no human soul about here, but wide, dark loneliness with branchless trees on the skyline, where there was a narrow bar of light. The enemy's black shrapnel was bursting high through the storm clouds, and now and then a heavy shell came howling out of the gloom and flung up a mass of smoke and mud. The batteries were firing, and their flashes were red in this daytime darkness.

Ypres was more sinister than I had ever seen it, and in its deserted streets there was a horrible sense of menace. The enemy still heaves shells into it, and it is now but the rags and tatters of the city which I once saw in its old beauty. Its ruin has now been completed, and one walks no longer through broken streets, but between mere rubbish heaps, with one great fragment of torn masonry, which was once the Cloth Hall, rising above them all.

REPULSE GERMAN RAIDS.

British Check Night Attacks Near Lens and La Bassee.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The repulse of German attacks near Lens and La Bassée and the recovery by a counterattack of British outposts north of St. Quentin are features of today's reports from the front in France. The War Office communication issued tonight says:

Attempted enemy raids last night at two points northwest of Lens and also southwest of La Bassée all were repulsed, our posts and batteries were active today east of Ypres.

Little flying was possible yesterday, owing to rain and a high wind, but during the previous night our airplanes carried out bombing operations actively against hostile airdromes and railway stations.

In air fighting, one German machine was downed. Two of our machines are missing.

Following is the text of the afternoon report:

Yesterday evening the enemy made a heavy bombing attack against the advanced posts southwest of Havrincourt, [north of St. Quentin,] which he failed to reach the previous night. After a sharp fight our troops at first were compelled to withdraw, but later they recaptured the posts, with slight loss.

The hostile artillery has been active during the night east of Ypres.

BERLIN, Sept. 2, (via London.)—Heavy artillery fire is being directed day and night upon the German centre on the Flanders front, says today's army headquarters statement.

The text of the report reads:

Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht: The strong artillery battle against the centre of the Flemish front continues day and night. Forefield engagements resulted in our favor.

Constantine to Meet His Brothers.

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 2.—Prince Christopher, Prince Nicholas, and Prince Andrew, brothers of former King Constantine of Greece, have arrived here. Ex-King Constantine, who is now at Zurich, also is expected to come to Berne shortly.

Gold Discovery in Andalusia.

MADRID, Sept. 2.—It is announced that gold has been discovered on the southern bank of the Rio Tinto, in Andalusia.

MAYOR OF CHICAGO DEFIES GOV. LOWDEN

Companies I, B, L, and H from Centralia, Carmi, Harrisburg, and Salem, under Major C. W. Harris, to entrain and get to Chicago in four hours.

Meantime the People's Council had started its convention. Stedman, a lawyer of Chicago, was elected Permanent Chairman and Louis P. Lochner Secretary. At 8 o'clock the special train carrying troops ordered from Springfield was nearing the city limits. All the facilities of the railroad system were centred on speeding the soldiers and preparing for their detrainment. Meantime the Seventh Regiment, armed for immediate duty, was resting under arms at the armory on orders from Major Gen. Carter.

A few minutes before 5 o'clock General Carter and Governor Lowden got together on the long-distance telephone and made their plans. General Carter ordered the Seventh Regiment of the Illinois National Guard, which has been taken into the Federal service, to assemble at once in the armory.

Warned of Troops' Coming.

Congressman William E. Mason was about to address the pacifist convention when Stedman announced to the audience that he had received word that the State troops were on their way to break up the meeting.

"Is it the wish of the assemblage that we adjourn or continue in session?" he asked.

"We'll stick," shouted a dozen.

"All right," said Stedman, "but when the troops come, offer no resistance."

Rabbi Judah L. Magnes of New York delivered the keynote speech. He said in part:

"Through the free discussion the American people might, while helping democracy throughout the world, develop rather than restrict our democracy here at home. Is it worthy of a democracy that citizens holding divergent views be driven from place to place to find opportunity for discussion? That they be threatened with imprisonment, that they be spied upon and maligned because in these miraculous days of change, of death and of life, of misery and hope, as lovers of America and their fellow-men, they speak and labor and struggle for democracy and peace?"

In relation to peace negotiations, Rabbi Magnes said:

"The President's message does not call for the dethronement of the Kaiser, despite of newspaper headings; nor of any of the present rulers of Germany. The President will take the word of the present rulers or of any rulers of Germany if, and only if, this word of the rulers is explicitly supported by the German people in ways acceptable to the other peoples of the world. What are the ways? To this is the issue between the belligerents now resolved. Then let this issue be clarified from every angle, in every way, so that the German people can give clear answer, yes or no.

"Should the President specify further the nature of the evidence required from the German people, it would be courageous and worthy of the solemn aims to be achieved if he addressed his communication direct to the German people. An address to the German people by the President of the United States during a war between Germany and the United States might well become one of the momentous documents of history."

Congressman Mason took a fling at Governor Lowden indirectly. He said:

"I'm interested now more in free speech in Illinois than in what one European country shall pay another in indemnities. War is here, a small issue now compared with free speech. There has not been so much misery in this country since Bunker Hill, and there have been enough tears shed to float a battleship.

Mason Refers to Treason.

"Our good President Wilson wants the people of Germany to speak. I ask that the people of this country be permitted to speak. Let them vote whether they want peace. If that be treason, make the most of it."

Ex-Senator John D. Works of California delivered a speech in which he said this was "the first time I ever heard of a Governor prohibiting peaceful assemblage."

"We are not against democracy," he asserted. "We are for it. We are against conscription, and we have a right to be heard on that subject. I wish more men had Mayor Thompson's spirit and the determination to carry it out."

The remarks of all the speakers brought wild applause from the delegates, about 300 of whom were in the Auditorium.

"We have accomplished our purpose," Chairman Stedman said in announcing an adjournment at 6:50 o'clock. "But the adjournment is taken because our lease on this hall has expired. Our next meeting will be announced secretly by the heads of the organization."

The pacifists appointed a National Executive Committee as follows: Seymour Stedman, Chicago; J. D. Works, Los Angeles; James H. Maurer, Reading, Penn., member of the Pennsylvania Legislature; Professor Scott Nearing, Toledo; Jacob Panken, New York; Morris Hillquit, New York; Professor H. W. L. Dana, Columbia University; M. A. Toohy, Toledo; Mrs. W. I. Thomas, Chicago, National Secretary of the Woman's Peace Party; George Roewen, Boston; Frank Stevens, Arden, Del.; Lelia Faye Secor, New York; Rebecca Shelly, New York; Elizabeth Freeman, New York, and Dr. H. W. Waltz, Cleveland.

Later committees were appointed on American Liberties, Economic Conditions, Revolutions, and Peace Terms.

A Committee of Seventeen on Platform was appointed, with Morris Hillquit of New York, Chairman of the National Committee of the Council, at their head. After four hours' deliberation the committee reported a platform of principles which was adopted by the convention by a unanimous vote. The platform called for the progressive disarmament of all nations, repeal of the conscription act by the United States Congress, a concrete statement by the Administration of its war aims, peace without conquest, annexation or indemnities.

Delegates Confer at Hotels.

After the meeting disbanded the delegates went to a downtown hotel, where they maintain headquarters. The manager of the hotel said the leaders asked for a suite in which a meeting could be held, but this was refused. Shortly afterwards, word came to the hotel that the troops had arrived from Springfield and that Federal soldiers had been ordered out in Chicago. The delegates then left the hotel in small parties.

There were conferences of leaders of the conference at their hotel rooms, and it was reported that an attempt would be made to hold a second session of the delegates tomorrow at the West Side Y. M. C. A.

It developed tonight that the meeting for today was planned last night, while publicly it was announced that the conference had broken up and that the delegates would go home as a result of the interference of the Governor.

When the special train bearing the troops arrived at the station nearest the hall where the conference had been held, Adjt. Gen. Dickson was advised by Secret Service men that the meeting was over. General Dickson communicated with Governor Lowden and then went to a hotel.

A fleet of taxicabs, which had awaited to hurry the soldiers to the meeting place, was dismissed and the soldiers stacked arms and took up quarters for the night. The 250 soldiers were met at the station by Sheriff John E. Traeger, with a squad of Deputies. The Sheriff greeted General Dickson and reported that he had been ordered by the Governor to co-operate with troops, and had many special Deputies ready for action.

Mayor Thompson dropped out of sight after authorizing the meeting.

Mayor Widely Criticised.

In the light of what happened today and what may happen in future as the result of the clash in authority between the Governor and the Mayor, there is much speculation as to what will or can be done to suppress Mayor Thompson.

There is talk of impeaching him, but this does not seem feasible under the Illinois law, as he is not a civil officer. The law provides for the impeachment of the Governor or other civil officials, if they neglect or overstep their duties, but makes no provision for removal of a Mayor. The State has no recall, so the only weapon on hand is that of public sentiment, which is extremely strong against Thompson.

The press without exception denounces him bitterly, as do many friends who had stood loyally back of him in the storms of criticism caused previously by his propensity for seizing the wrong horn of the dilemma.

"The Governor is the supreme executive power of the State," said John S. Miller, attorney, today. "The constitution of Illinois is conclusive on that point. The supreme executive power shall be vested in the Governor," says Section 6, Article V. of the State Charter, 'who shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.'

"Language could not be plainer. The City Government is simply an agency of the State, exercising local authority by grant of the State. If my memory serves, the Supreme Court of the State has decided that the police force of a city are officers of the State. Therefore the police force is subject to the orders of the Governor, who is the supreme executive of the State.

"In case of a conflict between the Mayor of a city and the Governor of the State in which the city is located, orders issued by the Governor to the police force would be supreme. A police officer who would refuse to obey them would, in my opinion, do so at his peril.

"The Governor may exercise his supreme executive power through such legal agency as he may select. I see no reason why the Governor might not, instead of sending troops, order the police force of Chicago to carry out his orders. The police would be bound to obey, no matter what contrary instruction may be issued by the Mayor."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—War Department officials said tonight that Major Gen. Carter, commanding the Central Department, had made no report on the situation at Chicago. All the departmental commanders have full authority to take such steps as may be necessary to meet emergencies arising in their districts.

The pacifist and I. W. W. movements in the Northwest have been watched closely by the Federal Government, and various outcroppings of the propaganda have been viewed by officials here with suspicion. Efforts have been made through Federal agents to get a line on the character and extent of this movement, its origin, and those behind it, their records, and ant

SOUTHERN TROOPS TRY TO RUSH 165TH

Alabamians, Who Thought It Easy to Pass Guards, Change Their Minds.

RIFLE BUTTS HELP THEM TO

Col. Roosevelt Reviews Irish Regiment After Being Received by Cheers of Visitors and Men.

Sentries of the 165th Regiment on guard at Camp Mills, Mineola, were attacked by members of two companies of the 167th Regiment of Alabama, who had overpowered their own regimental guards and then had tried to "rush" the Irish boys and escape from the military reservation, a few minutes after the mess hour began last evening. All were finally forced back to the Alabama camp, carrying with them sore heads and bruised bodies where rifle butts and military police clubs had landed during the conflict.

Shortly after the arrival of the Southerners at camp several cases of measles developed among the members of two companies, and all have since been under quarantine guards, while the entire regiment is under observation to prevent a spread of the disease. Their camp is about a half mile eastward of that of the 165th. Visitors had just been cleared from camp at 6 o'clock, and the men of the 165th were preparing for mess when sentries noticed uniformed figures dodging across company streets, while others tried to conceal themselves as they ran under trees or behind bushes. All commands to halt were ignored.

In a moment the sentries were in a hand-to-hand combat with some forty men. None of the guns of the guards was loaded, so reinforcements were called for. When they reached the battleground, where the sentries were struggling with the larger groups of the camp dodgers, a few of the attackers had got clear of the camp limits. They were pursued by members of the military police and some of the reserve guards, a chase that took several of them almost to the village of Mineola before the last of the runaways was captured and returned to the military reservation.

The Alabamians were without weapons, but they fought determinedly with their fists, even after they were largely outnumbered by guard reinforcements. One big, wiery infantryman threw himself on the sentry and bore him to the ground, and then sped away. The sentry, one of Captain McKenna's lightweight boxing pupils, overtook the runner and knocked him down with a jab of his fist behind the ear.

When the rush began, the Alabama infantrymen had scattered over a wide space, and at intervals in the guard lines the sentries and their attackers struggled and fought individually and by twos and threes. Blows were exchanged that started bleeding noses, and then some of the Celtic sentries got their fighting blood up and they began to prod and jab and hit with musket butts, until their opponents ceased their personal attacks. Finally all the runaways were herded into small groups and then merged into larger ones. Finally they were sent back to quarters more rapidly than they left them.

Colonel W. B. Screws and his staff of the 167th Alabama Regiment sent apologies to Major Lenihan, acting commander of the camp, and to Colonel Charles de L. Hine of the 165th, expressing regret for the disturbance caused by his men. The ringleaders of the trouble went back with the others into the quarantine detention quarters, but when that is lifted they are scheduled for punishment for the infraction of the camp regulations. In mitigation of the attack by the men, it was said by one of their spokesmen that they had no intention to attack the sentries, and had done so only to get away, because they wanted to join other men on leave and visit the neighboring towns.

"We haven't seen a thing outside the trains and camp since we came North," said one of the men from Alabama. "And we sure are lonesome for a hike and some sightseeing."

Colonel Roosevelt was the guest of Colonel Hine at Camp Mills yesterday, and the regiment turned out in review in his honor. A sentry, who recognized Mr. Roosevelt before he had reached the camp, started those nearest to him by shouting: "Corporal of the Guard! Call out the guard, a former President of the United States is coming down the street!" The Colonel made his entry into camp amid a chorus of cheers from thousands of the visitors and all the soldiers in view presented arms. Mr. Roosevelt inspected the tented streets of Companies F and G, and midway in each he paused and repeated these remarks to the soldiers:

"You are a fine-looking body of men. How I envy you! You are all doing an American job, and I hope you will see my boys when you get to France. I am sure you are anxious to go."

Brig. Gen. James W. Lester, acting commander of the Twenty-seventh Division and all other New York units of the Federalized National Guard except the 165th, received orders yesterday to be prepared to put his troops on the road for the Spartanburg training camp. They are to begin the move as soon as transportation is ready, and may move on Wednesday if the railways are clear of holiday traffic. The transportation problems are being arranged by Majors Edward Olmsted and J. T. Loree. It will probably take ten days for all the units to move campward.

At Van Cortlandt and Pelham Bay Parks and the Sheepshead Speedway camp the men felt they had only a few more days in which to see relatives and friends, and at all the camps yesterday was generally a farewell day to the troops by visitors and families of the soldiers. Despite the rain a field mass was celebrated at Van Cortlandt Park by the Rev. Thomas McGrath, and 150 soldiers received communion. Many relatives of the up-State members of the Second and Third Infantry Regiments at Pelham Bay Park were among the visitors and farewell family groups. In the afternoon the Ladies' Auxiliary of City Island had the officers and men of the two regiments at a farewell luncheon. In the evening an entertainment and concerts by the bands took place. All regimental bands at both camps have offered their services for the parade of the draft men of the national army tomorrow.

Active work will begin this week to recruit the Seventy-first Infantry, New York Guard, up to the minimum strength prescribed by the militia law of the State, which is sixty-five men to each of its twelve companies. To get recruits the electric truck for street meetings will be used. Second Lieutenants Joseph E. Barrell and Eugene J. Orsenigo, who conducted a whirlwind campaign that resulted in recruiting the Seventy-first Infantry, United States National Guard, up to its war strength, have been detailed for another recruiting campaign.

Max Hart, the vaudeville producer, yesterday subscribed $1,800 for the purchase of a truck. While waiting for its arrival the Lieutenants are devoting their time to the theatres and will be at the Brighton Beach Theatre this week. With them will be Bernard Granville, Earl Carroll, and Arthur Fields. The new State Guard that is to replace the Federalized National Guard is to be recruited up to 10,000 men by Oct. 1, and the Seventy-first is anxious to get its complement of men sworn in before that time. The newest company to be filled is Company F, which was organized last week. Tuesday and Friday nights have been set aside to receive recruits at the armory, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street.

A REGENCY IN POLAND.

Germans Substitute Three-Member Board for State Council.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 2.—The Berlin Kreuz-Zeitung learns from Warsaw that a Council of Regency has been substituted for the Polish State Council and consists of three members, Prince Rubenirki, as Chairman, and General Tdementovski and the Bishop of Warsaw.

The new council, the paper says, will take over all Polish affairs.

DRAFT ARMY AWAITS ORDER TO MARCH

Men Who Have No Khaki for Tomorrow's Parade Will Wear Insignia.

LUNCH AND PLAY TO FOLLOW

Members of National Army, It Is Expected, Will Provide City with Thrilling Demonstration.

With the exception of a few details of arrangement which will be completed today, the scene is practically set to make the selective draft parade tomorrow one of the most thrilling demonstrations in the history of New York. Every conscript who has a suit of khaki is expected to wear it. But inasmuch as there will be thousands in the parade in civilian garb, the Mayor's Committee on National Defense last night devised an insignia that every selected man will wear on his left arm. It is a brassard of khaki-colored cloth, bearing in red letters N. A. for national army.

These brassards will be distributed by the Exemption Board officers to drafted and accepted men only on the morning of the parade, as the men line up by districts in the side streets on Fifth Avenue between Eighth and Thirteenth Streets. By wearing this insignia the selected man will be recognized and admitted as a welcome guest to the various receptions and entertainments that will be held in his honor throughout the city.

The Mayor's Committee on National Defense expects to make the day a merry one for the selected men and a memorable one for those whom they leave behind. Following the parade, a luncheon will be served to the marchers, for which an ample supply of food and soft drinks has been gathered. In the afternoon those drafted men with the baseball fever will be welcomed free of charge to the game btween the Giants and the Braves at the Polo Grounds, with any number of extra trains on the subway and elevated routes supplied by the Interborough for their conveyance.

The draft parades to be held simultaneously in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn are scheduled to start promptly at 9:30 o'clock, rain or shine. Each district has been ordered to mobilize an hour earlier. At that time Captain A. L. Boyce, U. S. R., marshal of the parade, will meet the reserve officers who are to assist him, under the Washington Arch and give them final instructions before they take their commands. The quota of every district will be commanded by a reserve officer.

From present indications the reviewing stand party will include Mayor Mitchel, Colonel Roosevelt, Rear Admiral Usher, Charles E. Hughes, Major Willard Straight, and Adjt. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, representing Governor Whitman; the members of the Board of Estimate, the Aldermen, the State and Federal judiciary, and representatives of American officialdom and foreign Governments who have been especially invited to attend.

With New York's quota complete, Deputy Attorney General Roscoe S. Conkling took a day off yesterday. It was the first Sunday since the draft got under way that he was not at his office. A secretary and several clerks were there, however, to clear up the odds and ends that still require attention. It was reported yesterday that some local boards which have been meeting in public school buildings will have to seek other quarters when school opens. In most cases, however, it is expected that the Board of Education will provide a room where such work as remains can be finished.

A number of men reported by local exemption boards through THE TIMES as having failed to appear for physical examination have since offered satisfactory explanations convincing their respective boards that their names should be removed from the list of delinquents. Among them were the following:

ERIE TRAIN TEARS INTO STATION WALLS

Crew Loses Control in Jersey City Station and Eight Cars Run Wild.

A train of eight passenger cars got away from the train crew that was handling it in the Erie Railroad yards at Jersey City last night, and, running over a bumper at the end of the track in the passenger station, tore down two wooden fences and burst through the wooden walls of the main waiting room. No one was injured, although fifteen women and children were sitting on a bench about ten feet from the train as it left the tracks.

An investigation of the cause of the accident was begun by officials before a locomotive backed to the end of the track to pull the runaway train back into the yards. It is believed that the crew of a switching locomotive uncoupled the cars, believing that a brakeman was aboard to stop them when they reached their proper place at the passenger platform.

TYPHUS EPIDEMIC IN WESTERN GERMANY

Swiss Maintain Strict Quarantine on Frontier—Dysentery and Scarlatina Also Prevalent.

GENEVA, Sept. 2.—The Swiss sanitary authorities at Basle and all along the German frontier are taking measures to prevent dysentery, typhus, and scarlatina, which prevail in Rhine towns, from entering Switzerland.

All travelers coming from Germany are required to undergo medical examination, and neutrals crossing the frontier into Germany from Switzerland are warned to take precautions. The epidemics are said to be due to insufficient nourishment.

The frontier at Basle is virtually closed. The troops there have been trebled to maintain a strict quarantine.

PERSHING'S MESSAGE DISCUSSED AT CAPITAL

View That Our Troops Will Not Be in Trenches Before 1918 Awaits Official Interpretation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—No authoritative statement could be obtained from the War Department today in regard to the suggestion drawn by some persons in this country from an interview with General Pershing cabled from Paris to The Associated Press, that the United States forces in France would not be on the firing line until next year. Secretary Baker is away, and other high officials of the military establishment could not be located.

In certain high military quarters it has been argued that no American troops should enter the trenches until an army from the United States of sufficient size to make marked headway against the German lines was in France. The contention was that the experience of Great Britain in the war had shown that any comparatively small force would not be able to make itself felt in a way proportionate to the losses it probably would sustain.

The view of these military men was that no American Army should be sent to France until about a million men were armed and equipped. This policy seemed to be dominant when the French war mission arrived in the United States last Spring and represented that the presence of even a relatively small number of American troops on French soil would have a marked effect on the spirits of the Allies and would assist in reducing the morale of the German troops. Pershing's force was sent in response to this sentiment, but the military men who had contended that it was poor policy to send any army until a very large force was ready did not abandon their position.

Whether General Pershing was voicing this sentiment of some of his fellow-officers of the United States Army is not known. Nor is it known exactly what was meant by General Pershing seeming to suggest that American troops would not be on the fighting line until the beginning of next year's campaign. Discussion of the military plans of the War Department is discouraged by army officers.

The statement by General Pershing that "everything is going well with us as a nation and as an army," and his addition that "we are making giant strides," conforms to what is known of the activities of the War Department and its various branches in getting ready for big work in France. The view is held in high quarters that when the time comes the Germans are bound to be astonished at the advance made by the United States in the formation of an army, from the standpoint of both personnel and materiel.

SHIFTED TO PERSHING ARMY

Two Sections of American Field Service Will Be Transferred.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—It is officially announced that the camion, (or auto truck transport,) section of the American Field Service will be taken over by the American Army and incorporated in the Quartermaster's Department. The ambulance sections of the same service are now being taken over by the American Army Medical Corps.

In the French Army, to which the field service men have been attached, these two sections were under one head, that of the automobile service.

The enlistment of the personnel of the ambulance sections probably will require some time, as they are scattered along the front from the Somme to Alsace. The transport sections are concentrated in a single sector, and the work of medical examination and enlistment can be completed soon. This work will be undertaken by the Quartermaster's Department within a fortnight.

At cities en route cars bearing delegates will be attached to the train.

The Minneapolis convention originally was planned to give assurance to the peoples of all nations that the laboring men and women of the United States are solidly behind the Government in its prosecution of the war against the German Government, and incidentally to counteract the influence of the peace-at-any-price gathering of the People's Council, which it was planned to hold in Minneapolis at the same time. When the pacifist convention was forbidden in Minnesota the Patriotic Conference Committee requested that Governor Burnquist's decree be revoked, so that it could meet the pacifists, with their claim to represent American labor, face to face. When this request was denied, it was decided to hold the Labor Loyalty convention anyway, because of the constructive program which had been mapped out for a nation-wide campaign to overcome the seditious propaganda of German agents and pro-German pacifists in the ranks of the workers of the nation.

When the "Red, White, and Blue Special" left the Grand Central, with the band playing "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," special trains from other parts of the country also were on their way to Minneapolis bearing delegates to the conference.

Accompanying the delegation of labor leaders which left New York yesterday were persons formerly closely and prominently identified with the Socialist Party, who had left it because of the anti-American attitude of its leaders. Among these were John Spargo, the writer; Henry L. Slabodin, who is New York State Chairman of the Socialist Party; William English Walling, J. G. Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, and Lucien Sanial, a veteran of the French Commune, known as the "Nestor of American Socialists." Chester M. Wright, Aaron J. Levy, and William F. Cochran, the wealthy Y. M. C. A. worker of Baltimore, were also in the delegation.

Plans for the Convention.

The convention will open in the Auditorium in Minneapolis on Wednesday. Frank P. Walsh, Chairman of the Industrial Relations Committee, will be temporary Chairman, and on the first day speeches will be made by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and Charles Edward Russell, who was a member of the American War Mission to Russia. A permanent organization will be effected on the first day.

Acting as spokesman for the convention, John Spargo in an interview yesterday set forth its aims and objects.

"In the first place," he said, "the Minneapolis meeting will be a manifestation to the working classes of the allied countries, and even of the enemy countries, of the fact that the People's Council does not represent the great mass of the labor unionists and Socialists of America. Too long we have permitted the People's Council and the various groups associated with it to assume to speak in the name of the working people of this country. Our gathering at Minneapolis will dispel any notion which may exist in the enemy countries that the great mass of the working people are hostile to the aims and purposes of the Government of the United States.

"This knowledge will also have a very wholesome effect in Russia. Those who are standing with Kerensky in his valiant struggle against the usual coalition of reactionaries and extremists, like the Leninists, will be strengthened and inspired by the knowledge that the overwhelming mass of our proletariat is ranging solidly on the side of the Government and accept in this crisis the leadership of President Wilson.

"Secondly, the conference is going to provide an opportunity for the formulation of a definite constructive policy looking to the realization of complete political and industrial democracy at home. In our determination to give loyal support to the nation in this great struggle and to leave nothing undone that will contribute to the success of our brave allies we are not going to be misled into acceptance of the false notion that patriotism requires a blanket indorsement of every act committed by the Government, or acquiescence in the attempts of employers to gain advantage of their employes under cover of the patriotic sentiment of the time.

"It is, unfortunately, only too true that in times like the present reactionary forces become more aggressive than usual and the defenses against them are usually weakened. There have already been many invasions of the fundamental constitutional rights of the people. Efforts have been made by many employers to lower the standards of employment, and in general to take advantage of the situation and further exploit the workers.

"At our conference in Minneapolis we shall have an opportunity to make it clear to all men that we are loyal to the great fight for democracy in our international relations; we are determined to be equally loyal to the struggle for democracy at home. I do not know what specific measures the conference will advocate, but I have not the slightest doubt that it will unmistakably pledge itself to the maintenance of the democratic rights we already have and to take advantage of whatever opportunities may occur to extend our democracy further.

To Answer People's Council.

"A third result of the conference we may confidently expect to be the furnishing of a complete answer to the numerous claims and criticisms made by the People's Council. We can show the hollowness of the demand that the President of the United States make a definite statement of our war aims and call upon the allied Governments for similar statements. This demand, which has won the assent of a great many very earnest and sincere people who have no desire to be mere obstructionists, is essentially insincere.

"The leaders of the People's Council know perfectly well that the aims of the United States have again and again been clearly and emphatically stated in the plain language of the common people rather than in the involved and subtle terms of diplomacy. What President Wilson has done for this country, Lloyd George and Mr. Balfour have done for England, Premier Ribot and M. Viviani have done for France, and Kerensky and Tereschenko have done for Russia.

"We can throw the searchlight upon the attitude of the People's Council upon the question of war indemnities, for example, beginning with a demand for no indemnities, which is the most prominent feature of the People's Council definitely declared meant that Germany should not be called upon to make reparation for Belgium or Serbia. We find the demand varied to read that there must be no 'punitive indemnities,' and when we search for the meaning of this revised statement, we find that there has been no change in the attitude of the leaders of the People's Council. In other words, they still mask under that apparently sound democratic phrase their opposition to making any demand upon Germany that is consistent with fundamental morality.

"Now, according to an apparently authentic announcement of the league's present purpose, the demand is to be revised so as to read 'reparation by all belligerents for damages inflicted by them.' Like so many other productions of the People's Council, this has a very plausible sound, and undoubtedly wins the ready assent of a great many excellent people, whose lives are regulated by their feelings and emotions rather than by careful and critical thinking.

"This formulation means, if we are to give words their legitimate meaning, that while Germany must be called upon to make reparation to Belgium for the material damages she inflicted upon that unhappy country, Belgium, in turn, is to make 'reparation' to Germany for any damages inflicted by her upon her assailant in the course of her self-defense. France, suffering from the illegal and barbarous conduct of Germany, may expect reparation for the wrongs unlawfully inflicted upon her, but must compensate Germany. England must make reparation to Germany, forsooth, notwithstanding the fact that England made every effort to maintain peace, and that Germany and Austria insisted upon making war.

"In a word, I think we can very clearly show that at every step of its career thus far the People's Council, together with its allied organizations, has taken precisely the stand best fitted to serve the interests of the Central Empires."

GOMPERS'S WORD TO LABOR.

Calls on American Wage-Earners to Back Our Fighting Men.

ERIE, Penn., Sept. 2.—"Maintain a clear vision, stand true and loyal, that before another Labor Day shall come, a desirable, a permanent peace shall have been established, founded upon the highest concepts, justice, freedom, and humanity," was the message of Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, to American labor tonight, on the eve of labor's national holiday.

Mr. Gompers arrived here at 11 o'clock tonight, to keep an engagement to deliver a Labor Day address tomorrow. After speaking he will start for Minneapolis, where he will attend the convention of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy.

"Never in the history of the world," he said, "was it so essential that the peoples of all countries imbued with the spirit of freedom, justice, and democracy stand firmly united until these principles are established among all peoples of all countries. And of those, not one is placed in a position of greater responsibility to do service for the triumph of these principles than are we of the United States. The wage-earners, the working people, are in a particular and peculiar sense responsible, for upon them depend the supplies of the men in the trenches and on our ships, enabling them to fight for victory and achieve it, and also the needs of our own people at home."

dividual interests. He said that the up-State branches resented this.

There was a report current yesterday that instead of seceding the up-State branches might fight for the ousting of Mr. Weismann as President at once.

The attitude of some of the officers of the German-American Alliance since this country entered the war has been a matter of much comment. Only a few weeks ago another German-American organization was formed in this city, which, it was stated, had for its object the association of persons of German birth in an organization without prejudice.

Several weeks ago the National Security League sent to the New York State German-American Alliance a letter requesting it to hold meetings for the adoption of resolutions condemning the German Government and declaring to the people of Germany that the war could end but one way. In reply Mr. Weismann wrote to S. Stanwood Menken, President of the league, that his organization would take no such action and that he regarded the request to do so as tending to accentuate a division in the ranks of the American population.

In connection with the matter of teaching German in the schools, it was shown two weeks ago that George Sylvester Viereck, editor of Viereck's Weekly, formerly The Fatherland, had written to a large number of schools "advising" them not to drop German and offering to try to get them pupils if they did not.

WAR FAILS TO CHECK SOCIAL UPLIFT LAWS

State Legislatures Generally Have Strengthened Labor Acts at Recent Sessions.

WOMEN MAKE LARGE GAINS

Hours of Work Shortened in Many Occupations—More Workmen's Compensation Statutes.

With few exceptions State Legislatures have maintained or strengthened labor laws since this country's entrance into the war, on the theory that higher standards meant productive efficiency in the long run and that the relaxing of labor laws under the plea of war necessity might be unsound economics, according to a summary of the labor laws enacted so far this year in forty-four States, prepared by the American Association for Labor Legislation. Dr. John B. Andrews, Secretary of the association, said in a statement yesterday:

"Upon the entrance of the United States into the great world war, legal protections for workers were threatened by an ill-advised rush for results. But the nation-wide campaign, in which leading civic and labor organizations joined forces, to maintain existing standards in the interest both of maximum production and of human conservation, resulted in notable success. Efforts to set aside labor's hard-won standards on the mistaken plea of war necessity have been almost completely checked."

Hours of labor for women, the report shows, have been reduced in many States. Nevada and Montana established the eight-hour day for women in many occupations. Ohio reduced their maximum daily hours from ten to nine. Connecticut set a maximum of forty-eight hours a week in many employments. Delaware and Ohio restricted employment of women to six days in seven. New York extended the six-day week to women employed in restaurants. The only example the other way was Wyoming, which extended the maximum hours of work for women from fifty-six to sixty hours a week. New Hampshire, however, excepted women engaged in munitions work for the Government from the application of the maximum hour law and Oregon and California excluded from the classes of women under the eight-hour law those engaged in the preparation of fruit, vegetables, and fish.

Arizona established a minimum wage of $10 a week for women employed in stores and factories. Illinois and North Dakota established commissions to investigate wages and working conditions of women in industry. Wyoming, for the first time, established a commissioner to enforce labor laws. Utah and Pennsylvania gave their Industrial Commissions the power to make regulations having the force of law. Better factory inspection laws were established in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Public employment bureaus were authorized in South Dakota and New Hampshire, while Oregon established a commission to see that work and fair wages should be found for all workers. On the other side Dr. Andrews said:

"Mistaken zeal at the entrance of the United States into the war led to the introduction of bills in some Legislatures designed to break down labor standards. In addition to laws of this type, Connecticut and New Hampshire gave their Governors power to suspend labor regulations on request of the Council of National Defense. Vermont also authorized similar action by the Commissioner of Industries, with the consent of the Governor, and Massachusetts established a board of five members to grant suspensions in individual cases, after hearings.

"Eleven States strengthened their child labor laws, mainly by raising age limits, extending existing restrictions to new employments, or shortening hours. Texas passed a new general statute setting a fifteen-year minimum age for factories and Vermont provided for regulations in conformity with those of the Federal Child Labor act, which went into effect Sept. 1 with an appropriation of $150,000 for its enforcement. Kansas and New Hampshire legislated on factory safeguards, Texas on fire escapes, New Jersey on scaffolds, Montana on electrical apparatus, Delaware on sanitary equipment, and West Virginia on mines, all following the modern tendency to lay down in the law merely general requirements, leaving to the Labor Commissioner, Fire Marshal, Board of Health, or other administrative official the duty of issuing specific regulations.

"New Jersey forbade the manufacture of articles of food or children's wear in tenements. Workmen's compensation laws were enacted in Delaware, Idaho, New Mexico, South Dakota, and Utah, making forty States and Territories which now have such laws, in addition to the Federal Government's compensation law, for its own half-million civilian employes. Compensation in the new acts is 50 or 55 per cent. of wages, but is increased by half in New Mexico if the injury resulted from the employer's failure to provide safety devices required by law. In more than twenty additional States existing acts were amended, the changes being marked by a tendency to extend the scope, shorten the waiting period, and increase provision for medical care. Insurance for seamen in American vessels was authorized under the Federal Bureau of War Risk."

DRAFTED MEN HEAR EULOGY BY WHITMAN

He Tells Syracuse Throng the New Army Will Comprise the Flower of the Nation.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 2.—"It is an honor under the selective draft law to have been proved mentally, morally, and physically worthy to wear the uniform, to carry the rifle and to represent before the nations of the world the American idea and American ideals," said Governor Whitman, speaking today before an assemblage of 20,000 persons gathered to say farewell to the members of the national army from Syracuse and Onondaga County.

"There is nothing under the present system that in any way reflects upon the courage, the character or the patriotism of those whom the Government calls into its service," the Governor said. "With great care, with the endeavor to adopt every wise precaution, determined only that the armies that we send forth shall be composed of those best able to perform great and important duties, governmental machinery has been devised and placed in operation for the purpose of selecting the worthiest and the best. And so, members of the new army, with all my heart I congratulate you on having been found to be fit defenders of our faith.

"You are picked men—chosen for your worth—the flower of our State and of our nation. You stand for your country. You stand for liberty, and freedom, and progress, just as surely as Alexander stood for Greece, Caesar for Rome or Napoleon for France. You are going forth to fight against an idea that is wrong, a system that is wrong, a dynasty that is wrong, a country that, blindly following a despotism gone mad, has committed itself to the wrong.

"The most reactionary nation of our globe, the most autocratic, the one that has arrogantly defied political progress, has challenged the world as to who shall be master. As nation after nation joins in the answer, Germany insanely protests this to be further evidence that she is waging a defensive war.

"History knows two Germanics. There is a Germany which is very dear to the descendants of the sons of the fatherland, and they may be found in every country on earth—hosts of them in our own. It is a Germany that in the past has appealed to the affection and the admiration of peoples of other tongues and other lands. It is a Germany of love and romance, of poetry and song, of music, of art and of literature, the Germany of folk love, folk lore and folk life. It is a Germany that exists today only in the hearts of those who love what it has been. It is a Germany that has been transformed by a despotism that has filled the world with terror—a Germany of the clanking sabre and the iron heel; a Germany that defends the sinking of the Lusitania and the horrible atrocities in Belgium—a Germany of cruelty, brutality, barbarity; a Germany committed to the proposition that might alone makes right; a Germany that must go down if peace and righteousness are again to prevail on earth."

HANS ROSE STILL ACTIVE.

Ex-Commander of the U-53 Continues to Sink Merchantmen.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 2.—Lieut. Capt. Hans Rose, the submarine commander, who, after a seventeen-day voyage, appeared in German submarine U-53 at Newport in October, 1916, subsequently returning across the Atlantic, is at present busy sinking merchantmen, according to advices from Berlin. The German semi-official news agency appends to this announcement a note saying that the United States naval authorities considered the U-53's double trip so improbable that the experts declared in Congress in February, 1917, that the submarine was unmistakably accompanied by a provisioning ship, which had remained undiscovered.

"This incredulity of the Americans," adds the agency, "is the more comprehensible, seeing that it had to be admitted by the American naval authorities on the same occasion that the best performance of an American submarine at that time covered only ten days."

MARCONI TELLS NEED FOR WAR WIRELESS

American Army's Deficiency in Signaling a Weakness That Must Be Overcome.

GREAT PROGRESS IN EUROPE

Inventor Describes Work of Operators on Airplanes and in First Line Trenches.

William Marconi, inventor of the wireless telegraph, who was recently in this country as a member of the Italian Commission, said just before he sailed for Italy that "the most striking feature of my observations since I have been on this official visit to the United States is the surprising ignorance of your wireless men concerning the conditions in the fighting zone abroad." Mr. Marconi repeats that statement in a signed article which will appear in the September issue of the Wireless Age, the monthly publication of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America.

"It has required," says Mr. Marconi, "a readjustment of viewpoint for me to appreciate the fact that so much of the scientific development of the wireless art has been kept secret for military reasons; naturally the United States cannot know of things which to us have seemingly become elementary.

"No longer are wire telephones and telegraphs used in the trenches bordering 'no man's land.' We found it impossible to maintain these lines with the constant shelling with high explosives. When you go into a first-line trench today you will find few but wireless men. Unless an engagement is in progress, there will be only a handful of fighting men with machine guns distributed in small detachments about every 400 yards and supported by the ever-present wireless man with his portable set. With the first observation of an infantry attack, the wireless man gets into action and sends back his call for troops from the supporting trenches. They pour into them through a transverse trench and the hand-to-hand engagement begins."

Mr. Marconi points out that at the start of the war the Allies faced a serious problem finding wireless men fitted for trench service. To get these men soldiers were selected and trained as wireless operators.

"It appears to me," Mr. Marconi adds, "the most logical and the only practical thing to do here in America, since you have no great standing army, is to train your wireless operators as soldiers, which is a relatively short process compared with training soldiers to be operators. I do not know but that you are better off than we were, for this reason. It is certain, anyhow, that the United States can be a material factor in the war by sending to us at the earliest possible date all the available wireless men. There is a constant need for signalmen, and the American development of amateur experimenting having been so extensive, I look to the wireless men to make a great record in this war. The trained signalmen of the United States Army are a fine, efficient lot, and they will do very effective service for us in France, but they are so few that they will have to be considerably augmented to occupy the space we provide in our tactical organizations.

"The general supposition seems to have been that spotting of artillery fire has been accomplished through the use of various forms of visual signaling, such as flags and smoke bombs dropped from a plane. The truth is that our entire heavy artillery fire control is conducted by wireless from aircraft. At the very outset of the war we had neither equipment, experience, or personnel to accomplish this, so it was our custom to send up an observer with the airplane pilot, who carefully drew a picture of the enemy battery emplacements, flew back to his own lines, and dropped these drawings. This is no longer done. The observer now notes the results of his artillery fire and sends back by wireless such messages as 'Too short,' 'Three to right,' 'Two to left,' and so on. Many of the airplanes now in use carry as many as six or eight men, armed with machine guns.

"The wireless operator who makes the observations for fire control is provided with a map of the terrain, blocked off into small squares. As he spots the fall of the shells he sends back by wireless the number of the square and records a hit or gives directions for greater accuracy. While he is spotting he is continually subjected to tremendous shelling. While puffs of smoke break around the reconnoissance planes all day long, it is surprisingly seldom that they are hit."

Mr. Marconi concludes his article with a tribute to the wireless amateurs of the United States, and his advice to these thousands of young men is to "begin at once some form of military training."

PLANS FOR 'WAKE-UP WEEK'

B. E. Tousley Returns From Tour of Preparation in State.

Bennett E. Tousley of 8,615 Seventeenth Avenue, Brooklyn, returned to New York last night after a tour of the State in behalf of the State Council of Defense to arrange for another "Wake up, America Week," starting Sept. 17.

Mr. Tousley said he traveled in a motor car and covered two counties a day, conferring with members of all the county Home Defense Committees appointed by Governor Whitman.

The purpose of the week of mass meetings is to thoroughly educate the public on the reasons the United States is in the war and the need for military and economic preparedness. The plan is to send out ten teams of four speakers each. The best available speakers will be chosen from among lawyers, bankers, business and other representative men of the State.

O'RYAN'S TROOPS WILL SAIL SOON

will be traveled every day by hundreds of vehicles bearing soldiers, visitors, and supplies, and under their present construction bad accidents are inevitable. They are full of the worst turns I ever saw, and this morning no less than twelve accidents, fortunately all minor, happened. Of course, such a road will cost money, but I think that the building of such a road would be an economy, for a single clash between our big motor transports would easily result in $2,000 damage, not to mention possible losses of life and such a road would not cost more than $8,000."

This and a number of other improvements will be suggested by General O'Ryan, and it is understood that alterations will be made in the layout of the camp buildings after a more complete inspection has been made. Asked to speak on what would be chiefly sought at the camp, General O'Ryan continued:

"The Mexican border mobilization of last Summer increased the morale and efficiency of the New York troops fully 50 per cent. We shall try to increase our fighting worth by another 50 per cent. while we are here. To do this it is necessary to get and keep iron-hound, unrelenting discipline. We intend to get it, for it is the foundation, the essential of any army. The men are here for business—grim, serious, determined business—and we are going to impress them with that fact. Whatever they were before they enlisted in this division, they are now, and will remain until the end of the war, soldiers—and soldiers obey and fight.

"The little infractions will be taken care of, and failure to respond at once to an order will bring quick and effective correction. For example, if any order is given for every man in the division to stand out of his tent at 10 o'clock in the morning and tuck the end of his black tie into the bosom of his blouse, I shall expect that it will be done on the dot, properly and without any one taking it upon himself to ask an officer why the tie order was issued.

O'Ryan Wants Discipline.

"We will not have any unsoldierly speculation about orders; merely for illustration, the first offense will bring a penalty of ten days' loss of pay, and the second offense will mean ten days in the guard house, loss of all privileges, and sentence to the most unpleasant tasks of the camp.

"We intend to remold the character of every soldier if necessary to attain our ends. I have no doubt that loud wails will go up from some of the men who will regard all officers as tyrants, and me as a fiend or something equally pleasant. But if we are to be of any use, if we are to fight a winning battle, we must have a new kind of discipline—and the wails of the few will be disregarded in the interest of the many. The men of this division are, I think, more intelligent than any similar body in the world. For that reason, and because of their full and great patriotism, I know they will understand and will face the task with a salute and a 'yes, sir.'"

The General said that he had not received any orders regarding the contemplated reorganization of the division on the European table. It is planned to increase the strength of each infantry regiment from 2,002 to 3,167 and to cut the brigade stretch from three regiments to two, with a like reduction in the number of brigades to a division. It was not known whether the new regimental strength would be attained through inter-regiment transfer or by the enlisting of recruits, the latter increasing the task of training.

Completely transferred into camp, the Twenty-second Engineers spent the day unloading equipment and getting comfortable. By noon the regiment had pitched all its tents, and, with the arrival of rations, the cooks prepared the first hot meal. The chief item was corned beef hash; the never-failing bean was there; fresh vegetables made their appearance; there was Southern watermelon, and the whole meal was seasoned with the appetite that hours of work in the country air brought.

While the men were lined in conicals back of each company mess hall, the officers' tents were put up in a line facing the regiment camp. Off to one side the headquarters of Colonel Vanderbilt were pitched in a rough bit of ground with cotton bushes growing all around it. The Colonel said that the trip down had been without incident and that the camp appeared to be well suited for training purposes. After putting in practically the whole day blasting away the stumps that dotted their camp site, the headquarters troop finally got their home in fine order by nightfall. Pitched in a deep grove of pines, the camp is in the most desirable location here.

TWO SWEPT TO DEATH FROM FISHING BOAT

Seven Men Washed Overboard in Jones Inlet, But Five are Rescued in Small Boats.

Two unidentified men were drowned in Jones Inlet, near Long Beach, yesterday when heavy waves swept over a fifty-foot power boat that was trying to run through the heavy seas in the narrow inlet so that it could beat the tide into Hempstead Bay. Seven men were washed overboard by the seas, but rowboats put out from the power boat and five of the men were brought back aboard. The other two had disappeared, and an hour later their bodies were washed up at Point Lookout, about a mile further in.

About twenty fishermen had gone out on the power boat Athlete, owned by Captain Frank White of Wreck Lead, near Long Beach, and had been cruising about all day. When the Captain decided to come in he found that the tide had chopped up the water in the inlet so that an attempt to run through might have caused the swamping of the boat. He cruised around, and when he thought there was no more danger he tried to run through. The boat struck a bar, and then the heavy seas swept over it, washing away all the men who could not hold to fixtures on the deck.

After searching for an hour for the bodies of the men Captain White went to the life saving station, found the bodies, and took them to the Lynbrook Morgue. One man was about 25 years old and the other about 50. Both wore fishermen's clothes and weighed about 160 pounds.

The police reported last night that the two deaths from drowning were the only fatalities at pleasure resorts yesterday, and only about eight persons were injured in automobile accidents. C. Hetzstein of 261 Milford Road, New Brighton, S. I., ran into a truck on Willow Brook Road, Staten Island. Five members of his party were taken to the Staten Island Hospital. Carter Lubson of 442 Eighth Street, Brooklyn, and Miss Annie Carlson of 617 Warren Street, Brooklyn, sustained fractures of the legs, but the others received only minor injuries. Several of the persons in the picnic party in the truck were bruised and cut. Three persons were also slightly injured near New Brunswick, N. J., yesterday when an automobile driven by H. Courtney Brown of Janesburg, N. J., turned over in rounding a corner.

THE TAMMANY ANNEXATIONS.

Judge HYLAN'S indorser knows no man "more fitted to lead in the battle for the public welfare." The restoration of Tammany government for politics and the pocketbook only, the undoing of the reforms and improvements, the efficiencies, the expert administration, and the public spirit introduced into every department of the city government, the return of laziness, incompetency, corruption: that is the public welfare. The defeat of Mayor MITCHEL is "essential to the "safeguarding of Democratic princi- "ples and the restoration of the rights "of the citizens in their own govern- "ment." The inheritors of the noble tradition of pantataism are the conservators of Democratic principles, and citizens are to get their rights in their own government by voting for the misgovernment which is Tammany.

But Tammany is not only the old Tammany. Tammany is ready for the latest conveniences in political theory. Judge HYLAN'S indorser modestly hopes that "the platform will include not "only an unqualified declaration in "favor of public ownership of public "utilities, but an equally positive dec- "laration in favor of the right of the "public to control the disposition of "their public properties by a referen- "dum vote, and to control the acts "and the loyal service of their public "officials by the recall." What does Mr. MURPHY care what impossibilities, what whimsies, what nostrums of radicalism fill the platform, provided he can get a majority of the Board of Estimate? What is "a little thing like the Constitution," and debt limit, when you are looking for votes? Tammany's interest in city finance and city government is personal and practical. A platform is easily "recalled" after election.

The appeal to doctrinaires and votaries of "direct government" in the referendum and recall, the appeal to ignorance as well as to the love of novelty, is obvious, but the sober sense of the community may be trusted to reject schemes that are contrary to representative government, that serve, when they are put into practice, to confuse the electorate, that give interested minorities a golden opportunity. The city now has an admirable government. We are asked to substitute for it Tammany, to be assisted back into power by a medley of radicals, by false promises incapable of fulfillment, by a Falstaff's regiment of innovations that would touch the form but not the substance of the city government. That would be government of, for, and by Tammany Hall. What that is the city knows.

The coterie that rules Tammany and would divide the spoils, if it could bamboozle voters enough, must be tickled with the idea of a Tammany that cares a rap about "the rule of the people." Tammany exists to rule the people, at their great expense, for the benefit of the faithful.

In one respect the candidate of Tammany-Socialism-Populism, however "courageous," must have his tremors. There is one anti-war Socialist candidate for Mayor in the field already. As a substitute and indorsed candidate, will Judge HYLAN separate himself, in one most important regard, from his indorser?

Inevitably Judge HYLAN stands for the overthrow of trained, capable, and civilized municipal government in this city. Is he, by natural and necessary implication, also an anti-national, anti-patriotic, anti-American candidate?

FOR OUR ARMY ABROAD.

Cable dispatches about the progress of our army's supply system in France are contradictory. One day we are told, apparently with the acquiescence of the American field censorship, that efficiency is lacking in delivery of food, structural materials, and laborers essential to the completion of bases, communications, and camps. The next day's dispatches omit all criticism and gloss over the defects, giving definite information only as to phases of war activity notable for their success, like the work of the Medical Corps. Whatever the truth, there is no subject of graver import to the nation. The business of maintaining our troops must keep pace with the business of training those troops. Any faults in the supply system must be corrected at all cost. We are sure that they will be—immediately—as the defects discovered in some of the ammunition supplies have been.

Naturally, there have been delays, mistakes, slow adjustments of a peaceful people to the exigencies of war. The complex organization which buys, carries, and delivers supplies to the army in France is practically a new machine. Its cogs are rough, its wheels not yet well oiled. General PERSHING counsels patience and determination. Perfection in the movement of the new military machine is evolving surely, just as the men whom it serves are steadily advancing from the inefficiency of a peace force to the thoroughness of a modern fighting army. Wherever the faults lie, they will be cured. The hurry of getting under way our war arrangements is past. The country and the Administration have settled down to their new tasks confidently, with results recognized even by those who last year were most bitterly critical of our slowness in preparation.

The lines behind the lines must be and will be held to the rigid standards of efficiency set for our fighting men in the front trenches.

BULLETS FROM THE REAR.

Free speech is being interpreted to mean that an unoffending city like Minneapolis, or Hudson, Wis., or Fargo, N. D., must submit at any time to having a horde of strangers whom it regards as a public nuisance and danger come in on trains from the ends of the earth and make that particular spot of the earth a scene of disturbance. It is not being so interpreted by most Americans, but it is being so interpreted by those Americans who hold that the indefeasible right to be a nuisance and a danger in any city they may pick out from the railroad map is greater than the indefeasible right to order and self-protection. The former indefeasible right is the one they mean when they talk of the right of free speech.

Without discussing this question, and even granting all that may be said in favor of the right to carry free speech to the point of nuisance and to towns that do not solicit it, we wish to say something in explanation of those Western citizens who did not grant any such thing. We refer to those in Minneapolis, Hudson, Fargo, and whatever other towns have by this time risen in revolt against the proposed infliction of the "Peace Council." Their consternation when the infliction was proposed to be visited upon them, and the vigorous methods they took to avert it, seem to need explanation to the minds of those who regard them as having desecrated the ark of the covenant. The prompt action of the Governor of Illinois yesterday to prevent a disturbing and disloyal meeting in Chicago will have the approval of the whole country.

Free speech in time of war has this difference from free speech in time of peace, that certain kinds of speech in time of war carry death with them. They cease to be words, and become bullets. Attacks on the Government and on the people that are carrying on the war serve to thwart the aim of the war, which is to defeat the enemy and to avoid defeat for ourselves. If they were successful, they would cost the lives of thousands of American soldiers who would otherwise come home safe and sound. If they are partly successful, they will cost the lives of fewer soldiers than if they were completely successful, but they will still sacrifice many unnecessarily. To be concrete, if these attacks accomplish their purpose of convincing Russia that we are not united, and hence of withdrawing her from the war, they will destroy the lives of hundreds of thousands of Americans by prolonging the war. If they are only partly successful, and merely serve to confirm and prolong Russia's irresolution without actually detaching her from our side, they will destroy the lives of a less number, but still of a great many, who would otherwise come home to their families. Every speech by a pacifist or a "Friend of Irish Freedom" counts a little in that result.

Therefore, when such a speaker makes such an attack, it does not affect the minds of Americans in his vicinity in just the same way it would if he were discussing Prohibition, or woman suffrage, or birth control. The man whose son has gone to the war, and who wants him to come back and not lie dead in some trench in France, does not regard the speech as a speech. He regards it as a bullet aimed at the back of that son of his. It is difficult for him to be calm. He is anxious, and it does not dissipate his anxiety when some one tells him to remember that free speech is a sacred right and must not be interfered with, whatever may be the consequences to his son. He perversely regards his son as of more value than free speech, which is egotistical and individualistic, but inevitable as long as human nature remains imperfect. If he actually saw a German soldier aiming a rifle at his son, and could snatch the German's arm, he would not be patient with any one who should interrupt him with an exhortation. Well, when he hears a pacifist or an "Irish Freedom" speech he does see a rifle aimed at his son. Every pacifist speech is a German bullet, every one does its bit to prolong the war and thwart the work of the American soldiers in France. He knows it; and when he sees a band of these men descending on his town to fire these bullets, knowing well that exaggerated reports of the meeting they are going to hold will be sent over to Russia and to Germany and transformed into German shot and shell, he and other fathers and brothers of Hudson, or Minneapolis, or Fargo, act on a primitive impulse. They tell these servants of the German cause that they shall not fire those bullets in Hudson. Afterward they feel proud of themselves that they showed such self-restraint, and are much amazed to find themselves the text of homilies about the wickedness of denying free speech.

In an ideal state of human nature men will be so transmogrified that they will see everything from a lofty plane on which the ego never enters. But as long as men are human they will continue to take the same view of these matters as was taken at Hudson, at Fargo, and at Minneapolis. Free speech more valuable than life? Yes, answers fallible man indifferently. More valuable than the life of your son? Ah, that is a different thing; and as the war goes on and that question becomes more pressing and personal, these men who play with gunpowder and dynamite in the name of free speech will find that the name they conjure with must not be pushed too far.

CONSCRIPTION IN CANADA.

About the Dominion Military Service bill, which became a law last week, the apparent tempest that has raged seems to be chiefly political. In Quebec the opposition to the Government rests on older causes or want of cause. Quebec nationalism, varying in its degrees of obstreperousness, is always with the Canadians. Conscription, in contemplation, is nothing new in Canada. The Militia act of 1906 authorized the Government to call out all male Canadians between 18 and 60 for active service at home or overseas, in the defense of Canada, the quota to be had by ballot. The Militia act is a conscription act. The Government could have availed itself of that act, but it wanted a selective instead of a general draft. The preamble to the Military Service act recites, and sufficiently justifies, it. Because so many men have left the farms and factories as volunteers, and because "the productivity of the Dominion" must be maintained, "it is expedient to secure the "men still required, not by ballot, but "by selective draft."

Most Americans will not question the superiority of the new form of conscription. But Parliament holds on by renewals. The Liberal politicians have been in the cold for six years. Sir ROBERT BORDEN has made all sorts of offers to bring about a coalition, a union Government. He has even offered to resign. Some thoughtful Liberal statesmen were so patriotic as to consent to a union Government on that condition, and named his successor. Sir WILFRID LAURIER and the canny Liberal politicians in general hold off. So intensely political are they that it almost seems as if the winning of the war were a trifle in their eyes compared with winning an election and the spoils.

Many of the Conservatives are as stiff for their party. The Minister of Public Works resigned because he was weary of Sir ROBERT'S negotiations with the Liberals. In short, there must be a general election. There is rather more politics to the square inch in Canada than in the United States. Let us hope that "Win-the-War" will be the ruling issue. There are various other issues that may have their effect, especially in the western provinces. Possibly, if it were his war, if he were in charge of it in Canada, Sir WILFRID LAURIER would be a little less of a Quebecer and a Liberal politician, accomplished and astute, but often highly ambiguous. Since the Military Service bill has become law, however, he has told the House that "it be- "hooves all good subjects to see that it "is carried out," and he has accepted the Premier's invitation to name half the members of the Board of Selection.

THE ENEMY'S COAL SUPPLY.

Shortage of coal in Germany and Austria may hasten their defeat and the coming of peace. Ample supplies of this fuel are indispensable in war, as everybody knows, for the treatment of metals and the manufacture of arms and munitions. Germany has used coal for the purchase of food from neutrals, whose Governments defend their increased exports of food by asserting that they must have the fuel. Switzerland is permitted to buy 200,000 tons a month on account of the loan of $112,000,000 which was virtually exacted from her. It was a "great sacrifice" for Germany to part with this coal, the Swiss President said, as every ton exported "intensified her needs."

That there is a shortage is proved by recent events and official utterances. A few days ago Germany imposed an export tax of nearly $7 a ton on coal shipped to Sweden, thus exciting complaint in that country, from which she has obtained millions of tons of high-grade iron ore and iron, to be used in munition factories. And Sweden was asked to send workmen to the German mines. They must bring food and other supplies, it was added, and other Swedes were required to load the coal on ships at Hamburg. Monthly exports to Holland, partly in exchange for food, were reduced by 100,000 tons, or about one-third, in August, and notice was given of a larger reduction in the present month. The lighting of streets in German cities has been cut down to one-third of the normal illumination. When it was proposed recently that the use of heated water for bathing in private houses should be forbidden, the Berlin newspapers protested, saying that for want of coal many public baths were closed and that there was a notable increase of ailments due to enforced uncleanliness. During a debate in the Reichstag last week, members said that strikes at the mines in Silesia, caused by lack of food, had reduced the July output by 1,000,000 tons. Undernourished men, they continued, could not work effectively, and competent miners could not be spared from the army. Two days later the Austrian Minister of Public Works told the Chamber of Deputies that the "coal crisis" was one of vital importance. Although the Government had brought back 12,000 miners from the front, this had not prevented a large reduction of the quantity produced, because "undernourishment of the men" made them unable to do a fair day's work. To cut down consumption, a bill was introduced authorizing the Government to forbid the heating of nearly all places of amusement and to close "luxurious hotels."

There is coal enough in the mines, but men to take it out are lacking. Competent miners have been drawn into the army. Laborers who try to do the work are incompetent and poorly fed. They must suffice. Speakers in the Reichstag have recently criticised the Government for recalling to active service soldiers pensioned for disability, and even forcing cripples to enter the ranks. The condition of the coal industry points to approaching exhaustion of manpower at the battle fronts.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Decision Adverse to Reform.

In all of the States that have shown themselves sufficiently enlightened and sufficiently conscientious to forego the profits to be derived from child labor there will be, of course, deep and easily comprehensible regret that Federal Judge BOYD of the Second North Carolina District has found himself obliged to declare unconstitutional the law by which Congress denied the privilege of interstate transportation to merchandise in whole or part the product of labor done by children under 14 years of age or by those between 14 and 16 who work more than eight hours a day.

Should this decision be upheld by the United States Supreme Court, the section of the country which is the more advanced as regards untimely exploitation of the rising generation would remain as it is now, handicapped in its industrial activities by a self-imposed limitation elsewhere lacking and unable to compete for trade on equal terms with its business rivals. That is a situation at once so serious and so unjust that its continuance would be lamentable, or at any rate one that would be lamented by all who reject the claim of the child-working States that the little ones are better off in the mills than out of them.

What the highest court will do when the question reaches it remains to be seen. The Department of Justice officials express confident expectation of a reversal, but the case is without exact analogy unless one is to be found in the law that prohibits the carrying of intoxicants into prohibition States. The laws restricting the hours of women's employment stand on a different footing in that they were passed by State Legislatures and apply to State conditions alone. They violate, however, the common law principle of free contract about as much as does the statute criticised by Judge BOYD—the one relating to a father's right to the services of his minor children. Yet they were sustained, and sustained more or less explicitly, for reasons which, Judge BOYD declares, are outside his purview as a Judge.

It is at least possible that the Supreme Court Justices will again take into consideration such matters of higher expediency as determined their minds in the other cases and hold that the old common law rules are out of date.

Airplaning Across the Ocean.

Italy has made, in these later months of the war, a specialty, or something like it, of building larger airplanes than are used in the other belligerent countries, and she has found them efficient as well as mechanically practicable. Attention is deserved, therefore, by the suggestion or request of Major PERSITTI, now in this country as head of the Italian aeronautic mission, that the United States Government devote a part of its abundant resources to the construction of airplanes capable of carrying as many as twenty-five fighting men and a full equipment of machine guns and bombs.

With airships of this size, the Major declares, a successful war on submarines can be waged, and as he speaks from experience as well as knowledge of what can be done with huge machines, his assertion has weight at a time when there is such grave need to deprive the Germans of what they themselves admit to be their last weapon, their last hope of victory. Major PERSITTI goes still further and says that there will be no difficulty in transporting our big airplanes to the scene of war because they can cross the ocean on their own wings! That is somewhat startling, for no aerial crossing of the Atlantic has yet been made, and no journey even approaching it in length has ever been attempted. Moreover, the recognized aeronautical authorities have not claimed, and have denied, the present possibility of such an achievement.

That the thing will be done in time is doubted, probably, by nobody with a right to an opinion on the subject, but, of course, its immediate feasibility will be questioned by the majority of experts up to the very moment of its accomplishment. Yet none of us has forgotten the days when mechanical flight was ranked by all the Wise Ones with perpetual motion as a foolish dream of ignorance, and those who worked at it, including the brothers WRIGHT, were viewed with something between pity and scorn as trying to do something that was demonstrably impossible.

The Wise Ones are more modest, now, in deciding what can and what cannot be done, and the very wisest of them will cautiously refrain from pronouncing Major PERSITTI'S assertion premature.

Guarding the Birds Important.

An urgent appeal for nation-wide action to protect the insect-eating birds is made by Deputy Commissioner R. E. ROBBINS of the Massachusetts Game and Fish Board, and he supports it by recalling that in times like these it is not enough to aim at the "conservation" of food already grown and harvested—we should also protect it while growing from the innumerable small creatures that are so eager and active in drawing up to our table before we can sit down at it.

Birds are, indeed, the most efficient enemies of insects, and by fostering the multiplication of these good friends of man not only would our crops be saved from the enormous losses they suffer every year, but there would be a not inconsiderable saving of money and labor now expended in doing with poisons and like devices work that the birds would do for nothing and be glad of the chance.

There is obvious basis, too, for the warning of Mr. ROBBINS that the insect-eating birds are now in more than ordinary danger because the fact that they are themselves edible will be realized by the people especially troubled by high food prices and there will be more than the usual amount of pot-hunting. He also pleads with cat owners to guard those animals more carefully and to see to it that they are kept in at night and not allowed to roam abroad even in the daytime unless they have been well fed first.

Whether this would be sufficient to put an end to the slaughter of birds by cats is a bit doubtful, as most cats seemingly hunt birds more for sport than for food.

THE CRUSADE OF DEMOCRACY

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your reply to Dr. Eliot's astounding suggestions, printed in your issue of Monday, for a hypothetical peace conference, was so convincing that it might be left to its sure effect, in the spirit of Dr. Hale's famous apothegm in his "Double Who Undid Me": "What has been said, has been so well said," &c.

But having been moved gratefully to testify in recognition of the wisdom in his former paper, with its excellent analysis of the lessons so far taught by the war, and of the suggestions for after-settlement, it may be permitted to point out that the consequence indicated therein by Dr. Eliot himself cuts the ground away from the shaky and fanciful structure which he has now erected, to our consternation, with able but perverse intellectual ingenuity.

He had left it to be inferred that the present allies of the United States, and this country, were in effect a league to enforce peace, the details of which could be worked out later, but was now engaged in reducing to conformity a recalcitrant nation. This requires a complete victory over the profession and practice of its present Government, sustained by a people obsessed with a belief that the war of aggression is a "defensive" one, because the nation's a "defense" requires control of neighbors' supremacy on the sea, and a "Middle-Europe" empire.

The success of the German conviction synchronizes with the success of the Kaiser's military force. The door to the truth can be opened only by its failure, and meanwhile these claims, intrenched in the Teutonic mind, are anathema to us. When reduced by defeat to sue for terms, a de-Kaiserized and demilitarized Germany may be admitted into the "League to Enforce Peace."

It is a singular moment which Dr. Eliot chooses to plead "stalemate," in view of the military successes in the west and in Italy, the growing superiority in aerial warfare, the diminution of submarine piracy, the hope of a redeemed Russia, the promise of a great merchant tonnage, and the impending exertion of America's tremendous power. Meanwhile persons returning from Germany bring to us individually authentic evidence that, from shortage of food, she cannot endure beyond the coming Winter.

It was certain that, as time went on, people of tender hearts, the cowardly, the selfish, the German agents, along with those who claim that anarchy is a preliminary to peace, would bring forward more and more plausible "patch-work" plans that might deceive, while they would retard the full accomplishment of our great duty. Dr. Eliot is no theologian or he might be reminded of the doctrine which warns those who would attain the reward of perfection against the especially wily and insidious attacks in their later days by satanic power on the righteous. This sort of talk, helping to continue the enemy's blindness and to prolong the horrors of the inevitable task, coming from the warm heart of the Pontiff or the cool head of the "Emeritus," cannot obscure the motto on the shield of our crusaders: "No peace with the Hohenzollerns!" German in the Schools.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of your correspondents seems a little troubled by the fact that German will not be taught in some of our public schools. No one need be surprised at the fact, for the pupils do not wish to learn German, their parents do not wish to have them learn it, and the teachers, except a few of the native born, do not wish to teach it. More time can be given to French, Spanish, and Italian, with quite as good educational effect, if not better, and without arousing antagonism.

As to chemical and mathematical works not translated, specialists at any time can pick up enough of the technical language to use them professionally. There is no necessity of forcing the German language on unwilling young people at the risk, however remote, of inoculating them with the views of German Kultur. EDUCATOR.

FROM AN OLD PAINTING.

Great folk before us pray:
Like clouds at break of day
Their jewels flash and glow;
Proud King and Queen bend low!
The poor folk—where are they,
My friends of long ago?

And I that was so poor
Tread now on golden floor,
Where peacocks strut hard by,
Where purple walls stand high.
How lowly is that door
Where all my riches lie!

Splendor of Solomon,
Of robes like cobweb spun,
Of rainbow gems aflame—
These riches put to shame
The Mother and the Son
That all poor hearts should claim!

FAULTS OF GERMAN SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Like Those of the Government, an American Commissioner Found —Children Trained to Serve Aggrandizement of Sovereign.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The article on "German School Methods" in the Magazine Section of one of your recent issues states clearly some manifest deficiencies in educational methods as carried out today, in spite of a prevalent notion that they are in general superior to those elsewhere. The following comments made by Nathaniel T. Allen, in 1870, serve to show that even at that time there was a similar misconception. Mr. Allen, as the result of the study of the German educational system, as agent of the United States Commission of Education, made his study of European educational institutions at a time when there was beginning to be, in the United States, a very strong tendency to eulogize the German system as the highest perfection. From his extended and thorough investigation, he came to the conclusion that much of the adulation was based on too superficial investigation, and was altogether too laudatory, thus tending, he thought, to prejudice the cause, much as fulsome and indiscriminate praise in obituaries and biographies obscures the true merit of its object. He, therefore, while freely acknowledging "the charm and grandeur of this wonderfully exact and, in many respects noble, system," to use his own words, felt it necessary to direct attention to its defects, which at first he merely suspected, but which his thorough study clearly revealed. He, therefore, in his official report to the United States Government, discussed fully these defects as a moral duty, with the hope that thus the best results might be secured in the development of our American schools.

He thus enumerated these defects:

1. The German schools are autocratic, a characteristic inseparable from the despotic form of the Government of the German States, seen in every department of life, civil and military.

2. They are grossly unjust and illiberal toward women. There is a direct and public acknowledgment of the belief in a mental inequality of the sexes. • • •

3. The schools are undemocratic in their plan and execution. It is next to impossible for a parent to exercise the least control over the education of even his own child. Practically and shrewdly the children of the lower classes are so segregated that they are rarely found in the same school with those of the middle class, while these again are not found in the schools of the children of the highest class. At least four classes are recognized in the community, and the schools are so arranged as to provide for the children of each class in separate schools.

4. They are denominational, narrow, and bigoted. All children must enter school at 7 and remain until 14, or until confirmed in the Church, which sometimes entails a longer attendance, and during all these years must receive religious instruction in the Bible and the Lutheran catechism of the strictest construction, and must pass a rigid examination in the principles of the Lutheran Church and be confirmed in it; otherwise, when ready to go out into the world, avenues of earning a living are closed, for no merchant can employ a native German lad, no mechanic accept an apprentice, no housekeeper a servant girl, unless a certificate of Church confirmation is produced. The only exception to this rule of religious instruction is in the case of Roman Catholics and Jews. • • •

5. The schools are not free, with few exceptions. The view of all German educators at the period of Mr. Allen's investigations was that it was better to charge tuition fees. • • •

These defects are, as Mr. Allen points out, chiefly, if not entirely, due to the form, spirit, and aim of the German Government, so radically different from that of the United States. The German sovereign looks upon his people as his children, to be cared for, trained and provided with employments which shall, while ministering to their general comfort, add to his own aggrandizement. Mr. Allen says:

While the schools are so arranged as to develop the special talents of the pupils by selecting and recommending for higher education those who seem most promising, still, this is done with special reference to the fact that none of these children are ever to come into possession of manhood as we understand true manhood to be, with its broad and intelligent freedom, restrained only by these laws of their country which are in accordance with the laws of God. They are simply and purely Government schools, not public and common, as we understand those terms.

These criticisms of 1870 are apparently applicable in full to the methods in use a half century later. K. A.

BOMBING BY SEAPLANES

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A submerged submarine can raise and lower its periscope in thirty seconds. Even if so small an object could be seen and hit at any great distance, a gun could not be trained on it in that time. Under these circumstances the employment of boats alone to destroy submarines that they cannot see is useless. In patrolling and defending merchant ships, they are doing all and more than could be expected of them, handicapped as they are.

The addition of two planes, (the extra plane to be used in making changes in planes,) to an armed boat, would enable it to make a valuable under-water survey of an area from eight to thirteen times greater than the worthless surface survey that it could make without them. Their use would be a matter of both economy and efficiency.

The necessary, indispensable thing in all successful anti-submarine work, whether discovering and destroying submarines or protecting merchant ships, is the seaplane. An armed boat supplied with two planes is the ideal unit for both purposes.

Seaplanes can also destroy submarines by the use of bombs. Such bombs, in addition to the provision causing them to explode upon striking a submarine, should also be prepared for exploding at a suitable distance below the surface. The bombs if dropped near a submarine are capable of destroying it, as the explosion under water of any large explosive near a submarine will wreck it. They can also destroy submarines when they are submerged close to the surface.

Keeping the armed boat and the seaplane always near each other, by the seaplane's utilizing its greater speed in making short trips at right angles to and on both sides of the boat, removes the only objection to the universal use of the seaplane, as it makes the accompanying boat the base, supply, or mother boat, enabling the seaplane to be used anywhere.

Merchant ships should be convoyed both ways through all danger zones by armed boats provided with seaplanes. They should sail in fleets selected according to their speeds, so that they can keep together while sailing.

The union of the seaplane and the armed boat working together means the quick doom of the submarine. By sailing the merchant ships in fleets there will be a supply of both armed boats and planes to protect every merchant ship. Submarines will be discovered before they can get within miles of a ship, and they cannot escape as they formerly did, by submerging, as they can now be destroyed when submerged.

Early Dispute Over Rainier's Name.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read this morning the editorial in THE TIMES entitled "Rainier or Tacoma?"

In 1883 I was Traffic Manager of the completed Northern Pacific Railroad. Charles B. Wright of Philadelphia was a powerful Director, was President of the Tacoma Land Company, and had succeeded in getting Tacoma declared the official terminus of the road. It was seen then that Seattle was to be the more important city.

In a monthly folder I referred to "Seattle, the Queen City of the Sound." I received a letter from the President of the road, stating that Charles B. Wright had made a complaint because of giving Seattle this distinction, and in the succeeding issue the sentence read, "Tacoma and Seattle, the two Queen Cities of the Sound."

It was Charles B. Wright who, with official power, insisted on calling the mountain Tacoma, and it was not until he had withdrawn from the directory and his influence had passed that "Rainier" again received Northern Pacific recognition.

Wants Three-Year Dental Course.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some time ago all dental faculties agreed that beginning with the course of 1917-18 the dental curriculum should be raised one year, i. e., four years instead of three.

Many of our dentists and dental students have enlisted and a great many of them are going to be drafted. Many of our high school graduates who intended to take up dentistry as a profession will not do so because of the extra year, and in case of students of the draft age because of the possibility of being drafted.

To see that the country should not run short in dentists it would be only proper that as long as the war lasts the curriculum should remain as before. L. S.

LAWYERS ASSAIL GERMANY.

Acts Condemned by Law Committee of Bar Association.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The contention of the Federal Government that Germany has violated the provisions of international law in its methods of warfare is upheld by a report of the Committee on International Law of the American Bar Association, which will be presented at the annual session, opening here Tuesday.

Members of the society, who include Federal and State Judges, United States Senators and Representatives, State legislators, and other well-known members of the profession from many places in the United States, have been arriving all day to attend the sessions. Numerous allied bodies will hold their meetings tomorrow.

The Committee on International Law expresses its unanimous concurrence in the views of international right and human obligations presented by the President in his message of April 2. The committee strongly condemns as a "gross violation of the settled rules of warfare" the sinking of merchant ships without warning, the "homicidal conspiracies" against the domestic peace, trade, and manufactures of this country; the "wanton and illegal" murder of great numbers of civilians; the looting of occupied territory; the "illegal and inhuman" murder of Captain Fryatt; the deportation of the civil population from occupied territory, and the sinking of hospital ships.

Other reports will condemn socialism as an attack upon constitutional government, will recommend that the President and Congress be permitted to settle the question of the advisability of changing the date for the inauguration without interference by the association, and will ask the adoption of a memorial to the United States and State courts requesting a "conscious effort at the shortening of opinions and the recognition of brevity as a cardinal virtue second only to clearness."

The question of the best methods of protecting war-time inventors will also be discussed, with many other subjects of interest to members of the profession.

Elihu Root will preside over a conference of the Bar Association delegates tomorrow. Proposals designed to effect greater unity in teaching in the law schools will be discussed by the Section on Legal Education.

Boris Bakhmeteff, Ambassador from Russia to the United States, will speak on Tuesday before the Judicial Section.

CITY BANK AIDS INDUSTRY.

New Department to Help Manufacturers Solve Business Problems.

The National City Bank has established an industrial service department, the purpose of which will be to help its patrons to solve their industrial problems. The department has been placed in charge of Vice President F. C. Schwedtman, who has had much experience in industrial management.

"There are many signs," says the bank's announcement, "which indicate that production in all the industries is going to be more scientifically conducted in the future than it has been in the past. Industries are not going to grow up quite so much at random or be managed quite so much by rule-of-thumb as heretofore. They will be more carefully located, methods will be more generally standardized, relations with employes will receive greater consideration, and from the beginning of the process to the end every detail will be studied to obtain greater efficiency. Many of our manufacturers have been making good progress along these lines, but the investigations of the Federal Trade Commission show that, taking the whole body, there is vast room for improvement, even in the matter of calculating costs. A majority of them, according to the commission, lack an adequate system of cost keeping."

According to the bank's announcement, the war is causing an increase in our industrial capacity, and it will be a problem to keep this capacity employed when the war's demands fall off and the first urgent peace demands are satisfied.

"We must be able to hold our own in competition with other countries," the announcement says, "and, furthermore, we must understand that the home demand for everything can be increased by reducing the cost. If everything we consume were halved in price we could buy twice as much, provided the reduction was accomplished by a corresponding reduction in production costs."

To be well informed about a manufacturing business there is much that a banker ought to know beyond the amount invested in it, or even the "quick" assets shown by the inventory and past profits shown by earning statements, and it is for the purpose of making it possible for bank officials to be informed of the facts that the bank has determined to establish its "service department."

IRON CROSS TO BERNSTORFF

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 2, (via London.)—The Kaiser has just received the newly appointed Ambassador to Constantinople, Count von Bernstorff, who formerly was at Washington, and personally presented to him the Iron Cross on the so-called, white band, which distinguishes it from the Iron Crosses earned on the battlefield.

POETS OF AMERICA WOULD AID ITALY

Organize a Campaign to Raise $100,000 for an Ambulance Fund.

NEED NOW IS URGENT

Italian Commander Approves Work of Americans — Writers Issue a Nation-Wide Appeal for Money.

Italy's need of aid for the thousands of soldiers who are falling in the Isonzo advance has interested the poets of America, who are organizing a campaign to raise $100,000 by Oct. 1 for the American Ambulance in Italy. Under the leadership of Robert Underwood Johnson, the Poets' Committee for the American Ambulance in Italy, with headquarters at 70 Fifth Avenue, is making a nation-wide appeal for contributions with the hope of placing at least fifty ambulances, to cost $2,000 each, on the Italian front within a few months.

Two of these ambulances have practically been paid for by ten contributors. As fast as the contributions reach $2,000 they will be turned over to the "American Ambulance in Italy," of which Beverly R. Myles is the Director, for the purchase of another ambulance.

The poets of America are throwing their energies into this movement from a patriotic desire to assist an ally in her need, and also out of the sheer love and sentiment which English-speaking poets have always had for a land made dear to them by Shelley, Keats, Byron, Browning, Landor, and others who found in Italy their richest field of inspiration. Every poet and every author in the country who can be reached will be asked to consider himself a committee to raise money for this fund.

The Poets Committee in charge of the campaign is made up of the following: Dr. Henry van Dyke, Honorary Chairman; Robert Underwood Johnson, Chairman; Edith M. Thomas, Honorary Vice Chairman; Charles Hanson Towne, Secretary, and George A. Plimpton, Treasurer. Many writers have already entered into active co-operation with this committee, among them being Herman Hagedorn, Harrison S. Morris, John G. Niehardt, Clinton Scollard, Alice Brown, John H. Finley, Theodosia Pickering Garrison, Grace Denio Litchfield, Don Marquis, Olive Tilford Dargan, Helen Gray Cone, William Roscoe Thayer, and George E. Woodberry.

Arrangements have been made by the Poets' Committee to obtain the co-operation of the women's clubs, the Players, the National Institute of Arts and Letters, the Authors' League, and many other organizations devoted to the promotion in this country of art and literature.

The raising of this fund will be the first step in a general scheme to make the American Ambulance service in Italy assume at least something of the proportions that it has achieved in France. The American Ambulance in France has furnished 1,000 ambulances and 2,000 drivers on the French front. The total number of ambulances on the French front is about 6,000. The work of the American Ambulance organization in France has now been taken over by the United States Government, but as there are no American troops in Italy as yet, it is necessary, according to the statement made by Robert Underwood Johnson yesterday, that the American effort on that front shall be promoted and stimulated by voluntary organization.

General Cadorna, chief of the Italian forces, has given full approval to the work of the American Ambulance in Italy. Promoters of the movement learned last week from an agent of the American Ambulance in Italy that the activities on the northeastern front had made it highly essential to place at the disposal of the Italian forces at once a great number of ambulances.

Several members of the Italian Embassy have written letters of appreciation to the American Ambulance in Italy for the work that it is doing. From Beverly R. Myles, head of the American Ambulance in Italy, Chairman Johnson of the Poets Committee has received the following letter:

My Dear Mr. Johnson: I wish to take this opportunity of thanking the Poets Committee for taking the lead in raising the funds for the American Ambulance in Italy. From many authentic sources I have received assurances of the vital need of ambulances to be placed on the Italian front immediately. To these lovers of Italy of whom, I know, there are a great number among the poets and authors of America, I wish to express my appreciation and thanks for what they have done and are doing.

Very truly yours,
BEVERLY R. MYLES.

Contributions of any amount are requested by the committee. Checks to the Treasurer or Chairman should be sent to 70 Fifth Avenue, New York, "to the order of the American Poets Ambulance in Italy."

DEDICATE MEMORIAL TO EDWARD SHEPARD

Lake George Folk Build Amphitheatre on the Spot He Loved So Well.

2,000 ATTEND CEREMONY

Dr. John H. Finley and Francis Lynde Stetson Pay Tribute to Philanthropist.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The Shepard Forum, open-air amphitheatre, erected by the people of Lake George as a memorial to Edward M. Shepard, lawyer and lover of mankind, was dedicated this afternoon in the presence of 2,000 persons, many of whom came to Shepard Park to pay reverence to the memory of a man who had been their personal friend, at a spot that he loved above all others. Mr. Shepard died in 1911, and for many years he had spent his Summers at Lake George. Among those in the audience were Mrs. Charles B. Hewitt, a sister, and C. S. Shepard, a brother, of Mr. Shepard.

George McAneny presided at the ceremonies. Edwin J. Worden, Chairman of the Park Committee, paid a brief tribute to the good done by Mr. Shepard in the years he had been a Summer resident on the shores of the lake.

Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, said of Mr. Shepard's work:

"Words were the weapons with which Mr. Shepard fought for the getting of good things done in the world, words that were like the words of his Creator, quick and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword in discerning between good and evil.

"I remember a few Sundays after his death, in walking from the college, in the upper part of Manhattan, to his grave over in Brooklyn, I started out with a great handful of flowers, but on my way through the east side the children in the streets, who seldom see flowers and perhaps never have them, asked for them one by one, and when I got to the grave I was empty handed. But I thought it was, after all, as he would have it, and it was but an illustration of his bringing even into the poorest streets of New York the most precious gifts men can carry.

"In these days, when the deeds of the soldiers invite the praises of every land, I like to recall the remark of one of Mr. Shepard's teachers, treasured by one of his classmates. Commenting on this young student's exceptional work, the teacher said, no doubt thinking of some new heroism reported by the day's paper, for it was in the midst of the civil war, 'For Shepard, you know, is quite a hero in his way.' Yes, a hero in his way, and a noble, glorious way in the battles of the kingdoms of the mind, on whose field he died unvanquished and to whose scenes he returns a man of Heslod's golden race."

In speaking of Mr. Shepard's love for the spot whereon he was honored today Francis Lynde Stetson, who knew him well, said:

"For him there was no other lake, for him there were no other mountains, for him there was no other land than Lake George. I often tried to lead him away, but he ever returned to the lake of his love."

The following poem, written for the occasion by Mrs. Katrina Trask, was read by George Foster Peabody:

On the historic shores of Horicon—
Storied with legends of the long ago,
And sacred with traditions of today—
There lies a park of mossy loveliness
Embowered in verdant foliage. The Lake
Ripples in sparkling beauty at its foot
In ever varying, ever changing hues—
Bright morning blue, deep sapphire, shadowed gray.
And close upon the border of the beach
An Open Forum stands amid the trees;
It stands encircled by the winds of heaven,
Roofed by the sky, and carpeted with flowers;
The lofty mountains are its sentinels.

To this fair, spacious Forum we have brought
To lay upon the shrine of memory
An interwoven wreath of many leaves,—
Ivy and laurel, amaranth and bay—
Memorial of him who was, in one,
Scholar and statesman, patriot, and friend.

He was a scholar who had studied life,
And daily learned new wisdom from on high;
Who ever held, in life confusing day
Of freedom rush, an academic calm—
Yet still with progress kept his virile pace;
Who measured men and public enterprise
By classic, as by modern measurements;
He knew the best in both and took that best
With quick discernment and deliberate thought.

He was, indeed, a statesman—he foresaw
The far off vision of great things to be,
And strove to bring it near; with vital words
He called on men to follow the far gleam;
And warned them also of impending ills.
He knew the fatal rocks and shallow shoals,
But steered his course by the clear star of faith.

He was a patriot—he put aside
His own advantage for the sake of truth;
Foregoing splendor of proud palaces
He was content to build protecting dikes
Against the inrush of disastrous tides.

He was a friend—he knew great friendship's heart!
No man, no woman unto whom he gave
The shining crown of friendship, can forget—
His chivalry, his courtesy, his care,
His lavish generosity which showed
All honor, all preferment to the friend
And asked only to be allowed to serve.
That friendship is a living memory,
Too deep for tears, too eloquent for words.

The Rev. Edward M. Parrott, rector of St. James's Episcopal Church of Lake George, said that it was most fitting that the people of Lake George erect a memorial to a man so well loved by them in common with all the rest of the people of the State.

TO DIRECT WAR MUSIC.

Committee Meets Today to Lay Plans to Popularize Singing.

The first meeting of the committee for the supervision of music in the army and navy will be held this morning at the offices of Lee F. Hanmer in the Sage Foundation Building. Four members of the committee have already been approved by the Commission on Training Camp Activities, and it is expected that a fifth member, who probably will be a representative from the navy, will be named this morning. The members already approved are W. Kirkpatrick Brice, Treasurer of the New York Community Chorus, who will head the committee; Lee F. Hanmer of the War Department's Commission on Training Camp Activities, Max Morgenthau, a nephew of former Ambassador Henry Morgenthau, and John Alden Carpenter, the Chicago composer. Miss Frances Brundage of the Chicago Civic Music Association has been named Secretary of the new committee.

"The members of the committee will be directly responsible for all musical activities now in the army and navy but in the Red Cross and ambulance services as well," said Mr. Morgenthau. "Our work will be not only in this country, but in the camps abroad; in fact, wherever men in the United States service are stationed.

"It is proposed to issue an official army and navy song book for distribution among United States forces. Selection of appropriate pieces is now being made by competent persons, and if they meet with our approval early printing undoubtedly will be authorized. Our purpose is merely to provide the stimulus for community singing, and we hope to carry this out into every regiment and company in the army. For group singing in the large camps we will provide suitable leaders. Another duty of the committee will be to organize and provide for proper bands in the army and navy."

SUSPECT NEW PARIS DAILY.

Believed to Represent Secret Propaganda for Premature Peace.

PARIS, Aug. 4, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—War time would not appear favorable to the launching of new newspapers, yet at least a dozen new newspapers have appeared in Paris since the war began, some weekly and some daily. An important addition to the French morning press appeared two months ago, a one-cent paper, launched with a tremendous advertising campaign. When it appeared it was found that no name of owner, director, editor, or other responsible person appeared on it. The only name given was that of the "manager," printed obscurely.

A few weeks after its appearance the new paper was violently attacked in Gustave Hervé's paper, La Victoire, as being intended to undermine French morale and bring about a premature peace. One result has been that a bill has been introduced in the Chamber by several Deputies, among them Maurice Barrès, which proposes that the Government shall prohibit any attempt to influence public opinion by the issue or diffusion of certain publications, shall give Parliament the means to know the names of all persons participating in these publications, either financially, editorially or otherwise, and shall command the publication in the Official Journal of the names and nationalities of directors, officers, and managers of every company formed to publish any periodical, daily, or occasional.

BENEFIT FOR 12TH INFANTRY

Raymond Hitchcock Late, Having Been Arrested for Speeding.

The Twelfth Infantry, N. Y. N. G., was the beneficiary of an entertainment given last night in the Manhattan Opera House. Many of the seats were sold at premiums and there was an elaborate program, with quantities of advertising that brought in considerable revenue, so the gross receipts were approximately $25,000.

The entertainment was under the auspices of the Friars. James J. Morton, who seems to have fallen heir to the rôle of official announcer at these entertainments, introduced the entertainers, who were drawn from the ranks of the stars of the legitimate and vaudeville stage. Some of those advertised did not appear, after the manner of benefits, but there were enough who did to make a full evening's program. Among the latter were Will Rogers, Harry Kelly and Harry Clive, Dorothy Jardon, Flora Stern, Raymond Hitchcock, and Leon Errol. The last two named had to give bond in order to appear, for on their way to the opera house from Mr. Hitchcock's country place at Great Neck they were arrested for speeding. According to Mr. Hitchcock's story, they were only crawling along at about seventy-two miles an hour when the hard-hearted policeman arrested them.

The regiment's band accompanied a chorus of soldiers in singing patriotic songs. One of these was a new setting to the words of "America," composed by James J. McCabe.

TO AID JEWISH SOLDIERS.

Committee of 100 Women Formed to Canvass the East Side.

A committee of 100 women to canvass the east side for money to be used in relief work among the families of Jewish soldiers was organized yesterday in the office of Dr. Louis Glucksman, at 89 Avenue B, where the committee will have its headquarters. The east side will be divided into districts, and the destitute families of soldiers as well as those who wish to give money for the relief work will be sought out.

Hugo Freund of 47 Fort Washington Avenue said that the $10,000 he had given to the American Jewish Soldiers' Bureau would be available for the use of the committee. Mrs. Louis Glucksman, a member of the Mayor's Food Committee, was appointed Chairman of the Women's Committee.

SENATE RADICALS SEE DEFEAT ON TAX

Concede Committee Schedule for Graduated Rates on Excess Profits Will Prevail.

FURTHER TEST VOTES SOON

Believed That None of the Eight La Follette Amendments Will Get More Than 30 Ayes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Efforts to amend the excess profits schedule of the War Revenue bill in the Senate are doomed to failure, according to information obtained today. Even the most hopeful of the radical members were willing to admit that their plans had gone awry and that the fight to increase the taxation by the introduction of amendments providing for flat rates ranging from 80 per cent. down to a point close to the average rate of the Finance Committee's provision was practically over.

It is believed that concessions made by the committee last week to the group led by Senators Borah and La Follette will assure a large majority when the vote is taken. This opinion has been expressed by Senators Penrose, Lodge, and McCumber, who are firmly behind Senator Simmons, Chairman of the committee.

The Senate will hold a session tomorrow, despite the fact that it is Labor Day, and discussion will be renewed on the eight amendments submitted by Senator La Follette, which propose an increase in the excess profit surtaxes ranging from 72 per cent. down to 45 per cent., providing for a yield of revenue ranging from $8,280,000,000 down to about $1,250,000,000. The amendments will be voted on serially, the amendment providing for 72 per cent. being taken up first.

There seems little chance that on this test the minority of seventeen which voted for Senator Hiram Johnson's amendment yesterday will grow. There is a chance, however, that some of the amendments providing for a lower rate will win more favor. There are eighty of the ninety-six Senators now in Washington. At the best, it is estimated some of the amendments may muster thirty votes.

A vote on the excess profits schedule, including all pending amendments, must be taken, according to agreement, by 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The income tax section will be considered on the two days following, and then other sections of the bill will be debated until Monday, Sept. 10.

One of these matters will be the McKellar amendment providing for the application of the zone system to second-class mail rates. Defeat for the amendment is probable, according to information obtained tonight. Senators who lined up for the McKellar amendment in preference to the proposed 5 per cent. tax on publishers' receipts in committee of the whole are said to be prepared to vote for the elimination of this schedule altogether. Proposed increases in the rate for first-class mail already have been taken from the bill, and it seems probable that all parts of the measure which would alter postal rates will be defeated.

Some of the radicals are lining up for a hard fight on the consumption taxes, which fix imposts on sugar, tea, coffee, and cocoa, and it is stated that they have the backing in this fight of enough of the conservatives to make the defeat of this section probable.

A determined stand will be taken also to eliminate all taxes upon freight and passenger receipts of the common carriers, all of which, if those sections were adopted, would be borne by the shipper or traveler. A revision or elimination of the schedule of taxes on admission to places of amusement will be another matter taken up, but there seems to be little sentiment for an alteration in that direction.

He was a stepson of the late John G. Johnson, leader of the Philadelphia bar. General Morrell was born in Newport, R. I., Aug. 7, 1863.

URGES 7% LOANS TO CATTLE RAISERS

Hoover's Move for Increased Meat Supply Reported to Banks by the Federal Reserve Board.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Herbert C. Hoover, Food Administdator, has enlisted the aid of the Federal Reserve Board in a campaign to increase the meat supply of the country. Mr. Hoover has asked the board to help the farmers by suggesting that banks lend them money at not more than 7 per cent. interest—as compared with the legal rate of 8 per cent. or more—and the board has transmitted the request, through the Federal Reserve Banks, to the bankers of the districts concerned.

"The board has received a letter from Mr. Hoover," reads a letter from the board to Federal Reserve Banks, made public today, "stating that he is just beginning a campaign to secure a larger amount of cattle feeding in this country and that his investigation shows that the interest charge represents between 35 and 40 per cent. of the total costs of this industry.

"The legal rate of interest in many of the cattle-raising States is 8 per cent. or more, and the Food Administrator suggests that if banks would make loans to the cattle people at a rate of interest not exceeding 7 per cent., which he thinks they could afford to do, in view of the 5 per cent. rediscount rate on six months' paper available at most of the Federal Reserve Banks, a stimulus would be given to the cattle-raising industry which all will agree is greatly needed at this time.

"The board appreciates, of course, the limitations upon its powers in this respect, and does not wish to put any pressure upon the banks to induce them to charge less than legal rates, but it is informing you of the suggestion made by Mr. Hoover, in order that, should you deem it expedient, you may point out to your member banks this opportunity of rendering very effective help in the present food crisis."

URGES MONOPOLY SEIZURE.

Cost-of-Living Committee Points to Profits of Mine Owners.

If all interests monopolizing natural resources are treated as liberally as the coal operators have been, the cost of living to the average family will be enormously increased, according to the American Committee on the High Cost of Living, which in a statement issued yesterday urges support for the Government operation bill introduced in Congress by Representative M. Clyde Kelly. This bill empowers the Federal Government to seize any or all natural resources—coal, oil, gas, phosphate, sodium, copper, iron and other minerals, timber, and water power—and to sell the products at cost.

"This will prevent," the committee says, "the payment to monopolizers of these natural products of any value given by nature and for good-will. It is the only effective way to prevent those who have secured title to these necessities of life from taking a heavy, unearned profit out of the people of the country."

The committee quotes from Moody's Investors' Service Weekly the statement that the 1913 soft coal prices ranged from $1.01 to $1.14, and have, by the prices of from $1.99 to $2.05 fixed by the President, been raised to about 181.5 per cent. of the 1913 prices. The Review adds:

"The President is not giving the coal operators all they want, but is at the same time leaving them a profit of three or four times as much as they have made in peace times." The statement by the committee continues:

"The average price of anthracite coal at the mine in 1915 was $2.07. Labor cost has increased about thirty cents a ton. The price the President fixed for anthracite coal varies from $4 to $5.30 per ton.

"On the basis of coal prices fixed by the President, monopolizers of this natural resource will make at least $500,000,000 profit a year, which must come out of the consumers. This seems strangely at variance with the principle that a man cannot use the words profits and patriotism in the same sentence. If similar profits be allowed monopolizers of all natural resources, the average cost per family of such excess profits will be at least $50. Even if part of this be taken back by the Government through excess profit taxes, it comes out of the wages of the people just the same."

SHOWS CITIES' FOOD SAVING.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2. — Reports from fifty-nine cities, with a combined population of 21,000,000, obtained by the Food Administration, show a falling off of 11.3 in the total collections of refuse for July, 1917, as compared with the same month last year.

Collections in New York dropped from 52,173 tons collected in July, 1916, to 49,295 tons in July of this year. San Diego showed the greatest saving, the collections for July reaching only 43 per cent. of those for the corresponding month last year. This probably was due in part to the fact that the big exposition there in 1916 attracted great crowds.

Twelve of the fifty-nine cities reported an increase. They are Springfield, Ill.; Yonkers, Schenectady, Waterbury, Kansas City, Mo.; Peoria, Richmond, Berkeley, Norfolk, Dayton, Houston and Trenton. The saving in some of the cities has caused much concern on the part of some manufacturers, who had depended largely on the fats obtained from garbage.

Following are the principal cities in New York, Connecticut and New Jersey and their standing, 100 being used as a basis. More than 100 means increased waste over July, 1916, and under 100 indicates saving:

City.	Tons Collected July, 1917.	Tons Collected July, 1916.	Relative Figure for July.
Bridgeport, Conn..	1,649	1,783	92
Buffalo, N. Y.....	1,748	2,247	78
Hartford, Conn....	1,089	1,142	91
Jersey City.....	6,445	6,507	99
New York.....	49,295	52,173	94
Rochester, N. Y...	2,167	2,580	86
Schenectady, N. Y.	388	350	114
Syracuse, N. Y....	1,067	1,378	79
Trenton, N. J.....	1,453	1,462½	101
Waterbury, Conn..	507	447	113
Yonkers, N. Y.....	421	318	132

NORWAY'S FOOD RUNS LOW.

Only a Month's Provisions on Hand, Says a Newspaper.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 2.—The Christiania Social Demokraten asserts that Norway has provisions for only one month and that the import prospects are very gloomy.

The paper demands that the Government seize all private stocks and take over the control of imports and food distribution.

Garbat-Lubarksi.

Dr. A. L. Garbat and Miss Rachelle Lubarski were married yesterday at the bride's Summer home, 116 Chelsea Avenue, Long Branch, N. J. The Rev. Dr. de Sola Pool performed the marriage ceremony in the presence of the families only. Dr. Garbat will leave soon for France to serve as a reserve medical officer.

PRICE REGULATION HALTING BUSINESS

Federal Reserve Board Finds That Pending Tax Legislation Also Causes Hesitation.

GENERAL OUTLOOK GOOD

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The Federal Reserve Board's September bulletin, issued today, contains a review of business conditions in the country during the midsummer period. Generally the unusual conditions prevailing make it difficult to give comparisons. There is hesitation in some quarters on account of the uncertainty of pending legislation. On the whole, there was comparatively little change in conditions during August.

In the Boston district business is good rather generally, "but decidedly spotty, with no definite trend apparent." It is not unusual, says the Boston district report, to find one department of a business busy, with advancing prices, and another quiet, with prices sagging. In the Philadelphia district, where there was no important business development in August, a strong tendency toward caution existed on the part of buyers "owing to the uncertainty of future prices and the high cost and scarcity of many kinds of goods." There was a steady readjustment to war conditions, but business men generally expect that Fall and Winter trade will be active.

In the Cleveland district there is a good deal of hesitancy with respect to new undertakings, "doubtless due to the question of price fixing, which is now so prominent." Richmond also finds it difficult to give a clear view of conditions, "but general reports are optimistic, and there are few discordant notes." In the Atlanta district unlierlying general business continues in large volume and high activity. Less favorable conditions, wherever found, are the result of shortage of material, labor, or transportation.

Hesitation in Chicago.

Business in the Chicago district is showing some hesitation on account of the pendency of legislation and regulative measures. Proposals of the excess profits taxation and price fixing prevent manufacturers from extending themselves, but basic conditions are generally sound and crop prospects excellent. While there has been little business change in the St. Louis district, all reports indicate a very favorable outlook for Fall trade. In the Minneapolis district large crops are being harvested in Wisconsin and Minnesota, very good crops are being thrashed in the eastern portions of North Dakota and South Dakota, and grain yields in Western North Dakota and Montana are light. Corn crop prospects are good to excellent. Bankers and business men are optimistic regarding the business outlook.

In the Kansas City district unfavorable crop conditions have been largely overcome. In the Dallas district "there has been a marked and substantial deterioration in crops generally, especially cotton, within the last thirty days," but the business outlook in the district "is decidedly favorable." Grain crops in the San Francisco district will be reduced and citrous fruits have suffered, but wheat and oats will show a gain over last year's production.

"Midsummer has brought a seasonal lull in business and industry, contributing factors being unsettling attitude of those most directly inertested in Government price-fixing and continuing conservatism on the part of buyers at wholesale and retail. Manufacturers for the most part are buying raw materials only in quantities sufficient to care for orders in hand, and there has been general adoption of the practice of setting aside special reserves to meet possible losses occasioned by changes in price levels or buying demand during and after the war. Decreased buying of steel products by private interests has made for easier conditions in the steel trade, as is indicated by the decrease of unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation to 10,844,164 tons, the lowest since October, 1916, with a further decrease expected during August.

Building Lags.

"By national co-operation the railroads effected a reduction in car shortage from 148,627, on May 1, to 83,776 on Aug. 1, in the face of unprecedented demands for freight service and with material increase in gross and net railway earnings. Lessened activity in such lines as building materials, building construction work, furniture, musical instruments, civilian clothing, automobiles, &c., has permitted transfer of labor and supplies to other industries or other branches of the same industry in which activity has increased. Labor conditions in this district are less acute than in past months, except as to farm labor. Wages have continued to advance, and serious strikes have been avoided, the important exception being the strike of employes of shipbuilding plants which is now in progress.

"Owing to a planted acreage in this district far above normal, bumper crops of hay, potatoes, and vegetables are expected. Wheat, oats, barley, and rye will also yield well, but the corn crop is expected to be only fair. The fruit yield will be much short of normal. Food prices have fallen somewhat since the coming to market of new crops and apprehension as to a possible food shortage is much lessened.

"Stock market trading has been quiet for many weeks past, though the number of shares handled has been greater than for the same weeks last year. The public has shown little interest in the market, and since the middle of July prices have shown little general change. Bond sales have ruled below those of the same weeks last year, but prices have been steady since early July. Advantage has been taken of the period between Liberty loans to bring out several corporate issues of short-term securities at attractive interest rates, which have been readily absorbed by the market. The placing of $100,000,000 two-year gold notes in this market by the Canadian Government to yield 6.07 per cent. has been perhaps the most striking single transaction of the month, the $300,000,000 issue of United States 3¼ per cent. Treasury certificates on Aug. 9, of which $175,000,000 was placed in this district, being taken quite as a matter of course.

"Banking conditions are satisfactory. Required reserves of all members of the Federal Reserve system have been transferred to the Federal Reserve Bank, thus greatly increasing its gold holdings and ability to extend credit to meet any situation. Its gold and lawful money holdings on Aug. 20 were $642,000,000, or 85 per cent. of liabilities. Loans and discounts which on June 19 stood at $252,000,000 were on Aug. 20 only $67,500,000."

Weddings This Week.

The wedding of Miss Margaret Appleton Means and Charles Thomas Payne, son of the late General Eugene B. Payne, will take place at 4 o'clock on next Saturday afternoon at Stonecrop Lodge, Middlebury, Vt., the country home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David MacGregor Means of 6 East Fifty-eighth Street, New York. Miss Means will have her sister, Miss Elinor Haven Means, as her maid of honor, and Norman Buckingham Beecher of this city will be Mr. Payne's best man. The ushers will include George Roberts and Victor H. McCutcheon of New York. The Rev. Langdon Chevis Stewartson, LL. D., godfather of the bride, and the Rev. Dr. John M. Thomas, President of Middlebury College, will perform the ceremony.

Miss Angelina M. Dealy, daughter of the late D. E. Dealy and a granddaughter of the late Eugene Pitou, a Director of the Standard Oil Company, and William F. Carter are to be married on Saturday in New Rochelle. Mr. Carter is a member of the New Rochelle Rowing Club and winner of various boat races.

MAJOR McCLELLAN NOW.

Has a Job in Hoboken—Philadelphia Hears He'll Take Charge of Supplies

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—George B. McClellan, former Mayor of New York City and son of General George B. McClellan of civil war fame, has been commissioned a Major in the Ordnance Officers' Reserve Corps of the army and assigned to duty at the port of embarkation at New York in connection with the supervision of guns and ammunition to be shipped to Europe.

Since 1912 Mr. McClellan has been Professor of History at Princeton University. When the university season closed in June he disappeared and was thought to have gone to a Summer resort near Gloucester, Mass. Instead he went to the great army plant at Frankford Arsenal, near Philadelphia, donned overalls and began the expert technical study of ordnance. Captain Colton of the United States Army has been assigned to act as Major McClellan's assistant at the port of embarkation at New York.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—Former Mayor George B. McClellan of New York City, who, with several score of prominent men, has been on duty at Frankford Arsenal two months as a Major in the Ordnance Department, has been transferred to Hoboken "to take charge of troops and supplies there," according to an announcement made here today. This new duty turned over to Major McClellan by Secretary of War Baker was determined upon, it is made known, because of the great executive ability of Major McClellan. Major McClellan's successor at Frankford Arsenal is Major Patrick J. O'Shaughnessy, former purchasing agent of the Erie Railroad. The latter is also one of Secretary Baker's civilian appointees as reserve army officer, with the rank of Major.

Another new reserve army officer at the Arsenal is Hugo J. Diemer, whose works on efficiency shop management are largely used as textbooks in schools and universities. He is known throughout the United States as one of the foremost expert accountants.

MISS WAGNER, VOSHELL, AND ARMSTRONG WIN ON SEA GATE COURTS

MISS WAGNER WINS TWO NET MATCHES

VOSHELL ALSO TRIUMPHS

Defeats Beekman in Singles, and with Armstrong Is Victor in Long Doubles Battle.

Miss Marie Wagner, women's national indoor champion; S. Howard Voshell, the men's national indoor champion, and Joseph J. Armstrong, who is ranked sixth in the nation's tennis world, were highly successful in the Red Cross exhibition matches held on the Atlantic Yacht Club's courts yesterday. Several hundred enthusiasts watched the struggles and contributed at least one dollar apiece to the United States National Lawn Tennis Association's Ambulance Fund.

Miss Wagner, whose playing was exceptional, was on the winning side in two matches. First she played a singles contest of one set against Mrs. Charles Vernon Hitchens, Middle States champion, and after disposing of Mrs. Hitchens at 6–2, Miss Wagner paired with Armstrong, and was a big factor in the defeat of Mrs. Hitchens and Watson M. Washburn at 6–1, 6–4 in a mixed doubles encounter.

Voshell seemed to have regained the form he displayed about a month ago, as he made short work of Leonard Beekman in a singles affair of one set, winning by 6–2. Following this contest Voshell played with Armstrong against Washburn and Beekman, and the Voshell team was successful by 7–9, 7–5, 6–4.

The men's doubles match was the most entertaining of the day, mainly because it was a desperate encounter closely contested and in doubt until the last point was scored. Voshell's noted overhead work and the long volleys of Armstrong slowly counted for victory, although Washburn's work at the net and his ability to cover two-thirds of the court kept the battle waging on even terms.

Beekman played with unusual confidence with Washburn, and made a capable partner for the former Harvard star. Beekman drove sharply and placed his drives with enough accuracy to force his opponents into the back court and allow Washburn to play the net without great opposition. Beekman's lobbing also was noticeable.

Voshell and Armstrong made up a much stronger team than was expected. Armstrong always has been a top doubles player, but Voshell usually finds trouble playing with a partner. In their match yesterday both appeared confident and worked together well, especially since it was the first time they had played together. Armstrong's pounding underhand cut service and his soft returns frequently had Washburn and Beekman in trouble.

Miss Wagner played exceptional tennis against Mrs. Hitchens. These feminine leaders have met several times in the past years, and always the struggle has been close and hard fought. It was no exception yesterday. Miss Wagner was severe with her cross court returns and managed to keep Mrs. Hitchens defending her backhand court most of the time. The Middle States champion met the attack of Miss Wagner with some finished placement shots, but the national indoor champion was adept with passing shots and triumphed decisively.

Playing with Armstrong, Miss Wagner again exhibited the doubles skill which has brought her national attention many times in the past. Miss Wagner does not wince under the hardest volleys, and she plays a half court game which at most times finds masculine or feminine opponents baffled to find an opening. With the placements and good defense of Armstrong Miss Wagner was invincible, notwithstanding Washburn and Mrs. Hitchens were on top of every play and waged a great fight.

MANY IN TENNIS TOURNEY.

Staten Island Singles Draws Ninety Net Performers.

With ninety entries the Staten Island Red Cross tennis singles tournament started yesterday at the Staten Island Cricket and Tennis Club, and so interested and active were the players that the tournament progressed into the third round. Playing on the numerous turf courts the contestants found many opportunities for unusual exhibitions. Six players got into the round before the semi-finals, they being W. Hamilton, L. Austin, H. A. Cawse, B. A. Blyth, O. A. Blazebrook, and A. Fisher. Few defaults were noted.

The summaries:

GIRL MAKES LONG SWIM.

Miss Freeman Covers Trip from Spuyten Duyvil to Battery.

Miss Lucy Freeman of the local National Women's Life-Saving League, holder of the national A. A. U. long-distance swimming championship for women, yesterday added further to her laurels as one of the country's foremost long-distance natators when she swam down the Hudson River from Spuyten Duyvil to the Battery, without interruption, in 3:59:22 2-5. The distance is estimated at between thirteen and fifteen miles.

This strenuous swim has never before been undertaken by a woman, and seldom by a man. Throughout the long journey Miss Freeman never faltered, and she finished her arduous task about 200 yards out in the Hudson from the Battery wall. Her only worry when she climbed into the launch which had accompanied her on her swim was about her appearance before a moving picture camera which was operating close by.

Miss Freeman attempted the swim a week ago, but had to be taken out of the water at 110th Street because driftwood and river craft hampered her progress. Yesterday there were none of these objectionable features, and the young woman proceeded on her journey, chatting at times with those in the motor craft guiding her. The entire swim was made close to the Manhattan shore, and seldom did Miss Freeman go out further than a hundred yards.

Miss Freeman splashed into the water at Spuyten Duyvil at exactly 11 minutes after 11 o'clock, when the tide was at ebb. This condition of the water remained with the title-holder for the first two miles and gave her the most strenuous work of the entire distance. Her powerful four-beat, trudgeon crawl-stroke carried her along at a rapid pace and at 12:09:05 she passed Washington Point, going with the tide. The Fort Lee Ferry was left behind at 1:10:02 1-5 and at 1:55:34 Miss Freeman had passed Seventy-second Street. She reached Forty-second Street at 2:12:40 and swam past Twenty-third at 2:25:12. The last leg of her journey found Miss Freeman bucking a strong head wind and rough water, but she never changed her pace or stroke. Instead, she swam in machine-like manner to the Battery and was lifted out of the water into a launch at 3:10:22 2-5.

The best time heretofore for the swim was made by Robert Dowling in his journey around Manhattan Island two year ago, when for this particular part of his swim he was clocked in 4:30.

TROTTER DEFEATS PACER.

Oakland Boy Takes Measure of Speedway Champion.

A surprise was sprung yesterday on the Harlem Speedway at the sixth mid-summer matinée of the Road Drivers' Association when Clover Patch, J. A. Murphy's pacing mare which has been champion of the speedway for the last three years, was downed in a match race against her stablemate, Oakland Boy, a trotter. Murphy's trotter, making its first appearance in speedway competition after a long absence, led the pacing queen to the wire in two straight heats, taking the first by a nose and the second by about a neck. The times for the half-mile journey were 1:06½ and 1:07½.

In the colt class J. Leonard's Silent Sister encountered her stiffest opposition since her first appearance in the speedway, when she was forced to go three heats before earning the winner's ribbon. In the first and third brushes Silent Sister led by convincing margins, but A. C. Meckel's Fox Dean pulled up strong near the finish of the second heat and gained the honors.

BASEBALL FOR NEW ARMY.

Charles H. Ebbets, President of the Brooklyn National League Baseball Club, has invited the members of the National Army to be his guests after their parade tomorrow at the game to be played between the Brooklyn and Philadelphia clubs.

The young men who have been accepted for the new army will enter the ball grounds through the Bedford Avenue gate, marching in columns and headed by three bands which will accompany them on their street parade. At the gate they will be met by the three pitchers of the Brooklyn Club, Smith, Cadore, and Majus, who have been drafted and by any members of the Philadelphia Club who have been called for service and escorted about the grounds to the seats reserved for them.

The game will be called at 3:30, or as near to that time as the carrying out of the parade program will admit.

YACHTS IN CLOSE FINISH.

Mars Wins Manhasset Bay Race, with Hydra Second.

A strong easterly wind was blowing when eleven yachts of the "star" class lined up for a brush over the six-mile triangular course of the Port Washington Yacht Club, in Manhasset Bay, yesterday. Another exciting finish resulted. Four yachts crossed the finish line within 41 seconds.

Mars, cleverly sailed by her owner, L. A. V. Percival, led the way 16 seconds ahead of Charles E. Hyde's Hydra. The Shadow, sailed by W. L. Inslee of the Bayside Yacht Club, beat E. V. Willis, in the Altair, for third place, by 5 seconds.

Theodore Roosevelt Pell, the tennis expert, tried his hand with the Half Moon and finished near the rear. George A. Corry ran aground with his Little Dipper.

BARNES AND HAGEN TRIUMPH AT GOLF

Overcome Lead and Beat Nicholls and Smith by 2 and 1 in Wykagyl Match.

After being 3 up with only nine holes to go in their thirty-six-hole match with Walter B. Hagen of Rochester and James Barnes of Whitemarsh Valley at Wykagyl yesterday, Gilbert Nicholls of Great Neck and Alex Smith of Wykagyl found prosperity not to their liking, and allowed the visiting professionals to walk away with the match by 2 up and 1 to go. Barnes and Hagen negotiated the hazardous Wykagyl course in a best ball of 71, 70—141, while Nicholls and Smith got round the double journey in 70, 73—143.

Although only a few enthusiastic followers of the royal and ancient sport managed to get up early enough to see the first eighteen holes of the match played during the dewy morning, there were several hundred following the professional stars in the afternoon. Hagen played especially well during the afternoon, and by his efforts almost entirely the local pair was defeated.

Nicholls and Smith made the morning journey in 70, and were 1 up on their illustrious opponents when the luncheon rest came. Smith played exceptionally well during the morning session, and Nicholls, too, managed to keep Hagen and Barnes in the background.

Smith and Nicholls started in the afternoon as if they would make a runaway of the match. At the sixth hole of the afternoon Hagen was on in one pitch shot, but needed three putts, and lost that hole when the worst he should have had was a half. At the seventh Hagen missed a one-foot putt and again lost a chance to halve that hole. Smith sank a nine-foot putt at the ninth and turned with Nicholls toward home 3 up by the clever shot.

From here the finish Hagen and Barnes did nothing wrong and their opponents could do nothing right. Barnes won the tenth with a 3 and Hagen got a 4 at the eleventh to win that hole. Hagen's remarkable 3 at the thirteenth squared the match. As if there were not enough Hagen put his team in front with a 4 to win the fourteenth. At the seventeenth Hagen capped a round of brilliant play by sinking a twenty-foot putt for a 3, the longest putt of the match. Barnes also got a 3 on this whole, while neither Nicholls nor Smith could do better than 4.

Alex Smith made the home hole in 5 on both journeys and was the only player of the four to achieve such success. The best ball cards follow:

SPENCER DEFEATS KRAMER.

It Took Four Heats for the New Champion to Outride the Old.

NEWARK, Sept. 2.—Arthur Spencer, the national cycling champion, defeated Frank L. Kramer in a mile match race at the Velodrome here this afternoon. It took four heats to decide the race. Kramer was the winner of the first by a length and in the second the two speed kings finished in a dead heat, while Kramer lost the third by a length, and Spencer showed the way home in the deciding one by two lengths.

Willie Spencer, a brother of the "champ," won a ten-mile invitation race in which he beat out Alf Goullet, Bob Spears, Jake Magin and Alf Grenda. The time was 20 minutes 49 3-5 seconds. Spencer, Goullet, and Spears finished pretty near abreast.

Earl Thompson of San Francisco took the two-thirds-mile handicap for amateurs, riding from the 80-yard mark, while Fred Taylor, after sustaining a bad fall in his heat of the miss and out race, came out and won the final of the event.

Cubs Take First Game, but St. Louis Wins Second.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 2.—St. Louis and Chicago divided today's double-header, Chicago taking the first game 5 to 1, and St. Louis the second 4 to 2.

In the first game Chicago bunched hits off Packard in the fourth and fifth innings, which, with an error by Cruise and a fielder's choice, gave the visitors all their runs. Errors by Kilduff and Wilson enabled St. Louis to take the second.

WHITE SOX CLIMB CLOSER TO TITLE

Chicago Defeats Detroit Twice and Gains Full Game on Boston Rivals.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Chicago gained a full game on Boston today by winning both games of a double-header from Detroit, 7 to 2 and 6 to 5, the latter contest going ten innings. Chicago now is leading Boston by four and one-half games.

Chicago concentrated all its attack in the first and third innings of the initial game and scored all its runs. Cicotte had the visitors baffled in all innings except the fifth, when three hits and a base on balls netted two runs.

Russell blew up in the ninth inning of the second game after holding the Jennings men to three scattered hits. The visitors' rally in this round netted them four runs and the lead, but pinch hitters evened the count in the Chicago ninth.

Chicago made its winning run when E. Collins walked and stole second and third after one out. Jackson then filed to left and E. Collins counted.

REGULATE COTTON LOADING.

No Shipment Smaller Than 65 Bales May Be Made by Rail.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Fairfax Harrison, Chairman of the Railroads War Board, authorizes the following:

With the movement of the cotton crop scheduled to begin this Fall at a time when a combination of Government and commercial business will be bringing tremendous pressure to bear upon the railroads, the Commission on Car Service of the Railroads' War Board has issued instructions prohibiting the shipping of cotton in quantities less than 65 bales per car, and requiring as many more to be loaded as the size of the car furnished will permit. Notice to this effect has just been sent to buyers of cotton, together with a request that they place orders for their requirements on a basis of not less than 65 bales or multiples thereof.

In the Southwest and Mississippi delta districts, the average car will load 65 bales, and in the Southeast district the average car will load 75 bales. Consequently buyers are asked to order in multiples of 65 from the Southwest and in multiples of 75 from the Southeast districts.

The New England territory will be taxed to the maximum capacity of facilities this Fall, and the acceptance of freight by the railroads serving the territory north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers will have to be carefully regulated.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

It was a depressing week for security owners, a fitting windup of a month of declining values. Prices, with hardly an exception, closed off from one to ten points, with industrial companies which had expected to profit by war-stimulated activity the chief sufferers. Upward of seventy issues on the Stock Exchange made new low records for the year. The depression was not of sudden origin; it represented cumulative growth of uneasiness due to rapidly mounting estimates of war expenditures and the proposals for new tax measures to provide for them. The break in the bond market was proportionately as great as that in stocks, with many standard investment issues going to new low records. With one session cut to two hours and the Exchange closed on Saturday, transactions nearly equaled those of the previous week. A feeble rally on Friday did not make much headway, and the list closed with most issues at or near their poorest prices of the week.

It is seldom that Wall Street gives itself to discouragement so complete as it displayed last week. Every one recognizes the supreme necessity of making personal sacrifices for the Government. The hope of extravagant gains to be made out of the expansion of orders which it was known must result from the decision to join in the war on Germany was never widely shared and proved short-lived. But, on the other hand, it was never contemplated by the financial community that Congress would go to such extremes in its efforts to finance the war as largely as possible out of current revenues as to threaten the continuance of moderate dividends, honestly earned. Whether Congress will carry into the final bill proposals as radical as those which were received last week remains to be seen. Unfortunately, it is almost certain now that in lieu of the scientific tax scheme which it was thought the Senate Finance Committee would evolve after months of arduous discussion the country is to be experimented upon with a haphazard law which seems more than likely to work great evils for the sake of a few hundred millions of added revenues. It is proposed, first, to fix the price at which the manufacturer can market his output and then to penalize him by taking anywhere from 40 per cent. to 80 per cent. of his gains away as excess profits. At the same time the owners of the business are to have a greatly increased proportion of their individual incomes taken from them. With the basic idea of this plan the financial district has no quarrel. It is right and proper that the Government should check the exorbitant price increases; it is only fair that corporations making large sums out of the war should pay a considerable part toward the conduct of war, and with millions of men going to the front, with all the attendant dangers, it is no more than just that a substantial part of the incomes of those who have remained should be conscripted. The weakness in stocks and bonds has resulted from the fear that all of these measures are to be made punitive. Nothing would please the radicals in Congress so much as to see prices fixed at the minimum level that would allow continued operation of the industries. That in itself should prevent most companies from making what may be considered in these abnormal times excess profits, but to catch any corporation which, through superior advantages and efficient management, still reports large earnings, the excess profits levy would be made to take three-quarters of every dollar earned over the low pre-war average, if these men had their way. What should be done, obviously, is to establish a fair pre-war basis, not too far removed from the time this country joined the Allies, make a proper allowance for reinvested profits and new capital, with an additional allowance for what should be permitted a corporation to insure its maximum productivity, and then levy a very high tax on remaining profits. That would be a true excess profits tax which would differentiate between the companies which have enjoyed unprecedented opportunities for making money and those which have proceeded very much the same as though the war had not caused striking changes in the business world.

Last week's disturbance was heightened by the confusing estimates which Secretary McAdoo submitted to Congress as to sums which the United States must be prepared to raise up to June, 1918. These estimates were not carefully calculated on the basis of requirements in sight, but were apparently guessed at to cover all sorts of possible contingencies. Before the House Ways and Means Committee the Secretary declared that $19,000,000,000 will be required, and other guesses made this huge total still larger. These estimates all included $4,000,000,000 to be advanced to the Allies. That money will constitute loans which are not expenditures of this Government, but investments, which will in time be liquidated without putting further tax burdens upon the people. What the Secretary asks at this time is legislation authorizing issuance of $11,538,945,460 of bonds and certificates. Of this $7,000,000,000 will be for the purpose of taking the place of $3,000,000,000 of 3½ per cent. bonds already authorized, of which $2,000,000,000 3½ per cents. have been sold subject to the right of conversion into subsequent higher interest-bearing bonds, and $4,000,000,000 for further loans to the Allies. It is planned to offer either three billion or four billion dollars of new Liberty bonds on Oct. 1, this issue to carry interest at 4 per cent., free from the normal tax. The work of organizing the country for the flotation of this great issue is already well under way, involving as it does, mainly, the continuance in office of the committees which made such a success of the initial offering. There is no question that the amount authorized can be sold, but the work of the Treasury Department will be very much easier if the sale is accompanied by a rising market for other securities. In the natural course of events this is to be expected, for the new War Tax bill will have been enacted into law before the new Liberty bonds are put on sale, and it is a reasonable hope that it will be drawn upon much fairer terms than appeared probable from the Senate's discussion of last week.

Call money loaned at 6 per cent. on Friday for the first time since the middle of last July. This advance was fully accounted for by Saturday's bank statement. That showed a loss of $56,469,000 in excess reserve, bringing the total excess down to $12,307,000, or the lowest since the change in the methods of counting reserve. The withdrawal of funds by the interior simultaneously with the payment of the final installment upon the first Liberty Loan depleted the cash carried by the banks and made it necessary to contract loans.

LONDON FEELING OPTIMISTIC.

Fixing of New Rate for Indian Rupee Is Criticised.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Financial sentiment has been steadily optimistic throughout the week, despite an absence of better Russian news. Bad weather in the earlier part of the week that did much damage to the crops and a slight increase of submarine losses left the city calm.

The first new standard ship did well on her preliminary trials. Official returns show that even by June 200,000 acres of grass lands had been converted to arable, and that British stocks of cattle are now the highest on record. As from Sept. 3 all bacon, ham, and lard imported from America for British consumption will be bought by the Ministry of Food through special agencies analogous to the Wheat Export Company. All butter imports also are to be controlled by the State. Maximum retail prices are to be fixed for these four commodities, as well as for meat.

On Thursday the Government fixed the selling rate for the Indian rupee at 1s. 5d. The sovereign is exchangeable still in India for 15 rupees, and there is some difference of opinion here regarding the advisability of thus encouraging Indian gold imports hence or from America; the view is held that complete cooperation between London and New York for conserving the whole of the Allies' gold stocks is desirable. The silver market here remains firm at 45d. per ounce on shortage of supply.

Mines and industrials were the only active Stock Exchange feature, the former on South African buying. Armament issues were strong, particularly explosives, on the expected important merger.

ACTIVITY IN PARIS RENEWED.

Russians Lower, but French Industrials Close Firm.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—There was a good showing of activity on the Bourse during the last week, despite the holiday season. The closing was firm, with the exception of Russians, which lost ground in view of the uncertain political situation and the decline in rubles, the closing in which was 116. Russian industrials were depressed.

French industrials were active, closing with a firm tendency. Hotchkiss at 870 and Motobloc at 243. Rubbers are again in demand, for with lower production figures higher quotations may be expected. Financiere closed at 231 and Padang at 290.

The copper market was inactive. Utah closed at 643. Mexican quotations were practically unchanged.

French rentes closed at 62.35, the war loan at 87.90, and the Spanish exterior loan at 105.30.

President Wilson's reply to the Papal peace proposals meets with universal approval, and there is great satisfaction here because a firm attitude has been adopted toward utterly unacceptable conditions.

Gold in the Bank of France amounts to 3,274,718,982 francs, and gold held abroad to 2,037,108,484 francs.

No State Short-Term Notes.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 2.—It has been decided not to issue any short-term notes to pay the State's share of the cost of defense, State Controller Travis says, the necessity not having arrived. Thus far the State has spent $5,470,000 for defense. During the war with Spain the State issued $900,000 of public defense bonds. During the civil war the State spent $200,000 for defense.

AMERICAN BRICK GOING TO FRANCE

NEW DANGER FORESEEN

Foreign Inquiry and Scant Mill Stocks Makes Prospective Price Crisis.

Orders for 350,000 Hudson River common brick, placed, filled, and shipped to France last week, have an ominous bearing upon the future cost of construction in the metropolitan district of New York, says The Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

Some idea of the straits to which contractors are being pushed to get reconstruction work under way across the sea is shown by the fact that this brick, made by one of the best equipped manufacturing plants in the North River, carrying a three-letter brand, will cost the contractor $80 a thousand set down on a French dock, and yet this is said to be the first result of an inquiry for American common brick for European export running more than a year and a half.

The significance of this order is the more apparent when it is known that this is the first shipment of common brick to be sent across the ocean since the time brick was imported from Holland to build Fraunces Tavern and other historic old buildings of early New York. Never before has a genuine European commercial order for American common brick been filled. This brick will be used in the construction of gigantic refrigerator plants.

Inquiries have been frequent in the last year or more for American Portland cement and even for other basic materials lending itself to quick, yet permanent, construction. Prior to the war vast quantities of German Portland cement were used here, and, in fact, it only has been in recent years that American Portland cement has been able to excel in popularity for high-grade work the cement of Teutonic origin. The prospects are that, even before the war ends, this country will be shipping Portland cement overseas.

But the building material trade sees a new possible danger to American consumers with such meagre mill stocks on hand in the development of an immediate demand for basic commodities for export. Beginning this week more Hudson River brick plants will close. The slight drop in the price of Hudson commons last week to $8 and $8.25 was due to the sacrifices made by brick manufacturers who needed money quickly before the first of the month in order to close their plants and release their men.

It was the opportunity of importance for building material dealers to load fairly good brick at a price which probably will not be as low again for a long time. The result was that the week closed there were only nine barges left with options on three of those.

Prices remain at $2.12 a barrel, in 1,000-barrel lots, wholesale, New York to dealers, which is a $1.50 mill base, or 20 cents lower than the present price asked by the United States Steel Corporation for cement at Pittsburgh. It is interesting to note that Portland cement today is 10 cents a barrel below mill price in August, 1895, being at that time $1.60, Lehigh mill.

The September wholesale lumber list out today will show a slight gain in white and yellow pine, but for the most part lumber is being taken here as fast as it comes in. The supply is considerably behind the demand from dealers, who are taking in larger quantities than usual, in anticipation of a late Autumn and Winter building movement.

Practically all other branches of the building material market seem to be awaiting the now generally expected turn in building work. For instance, there were two important Fifth Avenue projects, indefinitely postponed last Spring, that are being refigured and will now go ahead. More new jobs in New Jersey and Long Island sections were reported to contractors last week than in any similar period, with two exceptions, since April, and at the same time advices were received from Philadelphia and Boston which showed that shipments passing out of these points bound toward New York were cleared more promptly by the railroads, despite the movement of a considerable number of southbound troops.

Building interests in the New York metropolitan district are expecting beneficial results from the mass meeting that Borough President Marcus M. Marks and the Building Material Exchange of New York are arranging to be held in the City Hall some time after Labor Day, when building investors, insurance companies, architects, contractors and building material supply men will have an opportunity to get a close-up view of the reasons why building operations throughout the East should be permitted to proceed.

A preliminary conference has been called for all building material interests for Friday, Sept. 7, at 2 o'clock, in the Building Material Exchange, Woolworth Building, to concur on the salient points to be brought before the investors at the larger meeting. Representatives from every branch of the construction market will be present.

ADVISES RETAINING BOND CERTIFICATES

Better for Exchange or Conversion Than Actual Liberty Debentures, Says McAdoo.

BONDS TO BE READY SOON

Secretary Points to Pending Legislation on Interest Rate as One Reason for Delaying Exchange.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2. — Secretary McAdoo issued a statement tonight recommending that those who have bought Liberty Loan bonds hold their full-paid interim certificates until Oct. 1 or until such later date as may be designated by the Treasury Department. But those desiring to receive them at an earlier date will have their bonds delivered at a date soon to be announced, or as soon thereafter as the facilities of the Government will permit. Secretary McAdoo's statement follows:

"With regard to deliveries of definitive bonds of the Liberty Loan, it has become apparent that, if Congress should enact pending legislation which would authorize the issue of bonds bearing interest at a higher rate than 3½ per cent. per annum, the privilege of converting the bonds (or interim certificates) of the first issue of the Liberty Loan may arise at an early date. Interim certificates have been supplied to Federal Reserve Banks for distribution and have been received, or can be received, from the agencies through which their subscriptions were transmitted by all subscribers who have made payment in full for their bonds. Full-paid interim certificates fully represent the bonds and entitle their holders to all the rights of bondholders as to principal, interest, conversion, and in all other respects, until exchanged for bonds pursuant to subsequent announcements.

"Attention is called to the following provision of Department Circular No. 76, dated May 14, 1917, offering Liberty bonds for subscription:

Provision will be made for the interchange of bonds of different denominations and of coupon and registered bonds, upon payment, if the Secretary of the Treasury shall require, of a charge not exceeding $1 for each new bond issued upon such exchange. Transfers of registered bonds and exchanges of registered and coupon bonds and of bonds of different denominations will not be made until Oct. 1, 1917, or such later date as may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury.

"On the other hand, full-paid interim certificates of different denominations are interchangeable without charge, and interim certificates of any denomination are interchangeable without charge for definitive bonds, whether of coupon or registered form, and for whatever denomination the holders may desire. In view of the foregoing, holders of full-paid interim certificates may advantageously retain their interim certificates until Oct. 1, or such later date as many be designated in pursuance of the foregoing provision of Department Circular 78, and until Congress shall have acted in the matter of the pending legislation, and the rate of interest to be borne by any new bonds, and their general character with respect to exemption from taxation and other matters, shall have been determined. The department recommends that subscribers pursue that course. To those desiring to receive their bonds, however, deliveries will begin at a date soon to be announced, and will continue thereafter as rapidly as the facilities of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, as extended by the aid of the many requirements incident to the war, will permit."

BROOKLYN—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

It Is Always Cool At

Manhattan Beach

You sleep "like a child" here with the air cooled by the breeze from the ocean. You get up fit for your work. You lose that tired, nervous, out-of-sorts feeling you have in the city. Your wife, your children—how they would thrive in this atmosphere!

You can live and enjoy life here and yet you're right near your business—no waiting for trains—none of the commuter's troubles.

Although Manhattan Beach is the finest Ocean Front Development in New York City, Lots are now selling as low as $850 each. Think of it!

WRECK IN SUBWAY HALTS GREAT THRONG

Empty Train Leaves Track and Tears Up the Rails at 145th Street.

TIEUP LASTS TWO HOURS

Friends of Soldiers at Van Cortlandt Park Held at Stations Along Upper Broadway.

For two hours yesterday afternoon the Broadway branch of the subway was tied up above 137th Street by a derailed train, while thousands of the friends and families of the troops encamped at Van Cortlandt Park were jammed around the stations at the end of the line waiting for the resumption of traffic. An empty three-car train, moving out of the 145th Street station to be parked in the yards just below ran off the track at a few minutes after 4, tearing up the tracks and the third rail for some distance. A south-bound train had just left the 157th Street station and was caught half-way down to 145th. After it had waited there for some minutes the passengers became restive and were allowed to walk back up the tracks to the station they had left, the auxiliary lighting system enabling them to find the way without trouble.

Ticket sellers along the line were not notified to stop selling for some time, and as a result crowds collected at all the stations. The congestion was most serious at the end of the line, where the crowds of women and children who had been visiting the camps of the Seventy-first and Twenty-third Infantry and First Field Artillery in Van Cortlandt Park were beginning to make their way homeward. As the sale of tickets continued and no trains moved out of the terminal, the platforms at 242d Street became more and more crowded, and police reserves had to be called in to prevent possible panic. Passengers who found the platforms already overfull tried to push their way downstairs, but the stairs were packed, too, and the attempt only made the jam worse. Many women and children were trodden on or pushed about, and even after the sale of tickets was stopped and the police, reinforced by soldiers, had quieted the crowds, the throngs still remained packed in and about the station. Later comers, seeing the hopelessness of trying to push through, went on down to the 235th Street Station, where the same procedure was repeated.

Officers of the guard regiments brought into service as many automobiles as possible, and the crowd was transferred to 225th Street, where they made connection with downtown and crosstown car lines. Meanwhile an Interborough wrecking crew was at work on the derailed train, and an emergency service was established from 157th Street north which alleviated the situation considerably. At some of the stations further down on the line the crowds assembling before the sale of tickets was stopped were so large that the police had to be called out to prevent too much confusion, but the re-establishment of service effected a gradual reduction of congestion. Transfers to the elevated and surface lines were issued, and many passengers were sent across 149th Street to the elevated after getting off at the last shuttle stop. Traffic was started again on the through line at 5:43. The first train south stalled below 181st Street and many of the passengers, becoming nervous, got out and walked to the 168th Street station; but after it was started again there was no further trouble.

L. O. Hayes, assistant to the trainmaster of the Interborough, said that power had been shut off from 147th Street to Dyckman Street within fifteen minutes after the accident and that orders were issued immediately to the ticket sellers to stop sales.

15 HURT IN BRIDGE CRASH.

Collision of Trolley Cars Ties Up Traffic Fifteen Minutes.

Trolley traffic on Brooklyn Bridge was tied up for fifteen minutes last night when a Vanderbilt Avenue car, bound for Manhattan, ran into a Gates Avenue car near the New York tower, demolishing the platforms of the cars and injuring about fifteen passengers. The Gates Avenue car had stopped on the incline because signals were set against it, and the Vanderbilt Avenue car came over the hump in the track. Before the motorman, Andrew Phelan of 502 Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, could stop his car it ran into the other. Phelan said the brakes failed to work properly.

Robert Crozier, a sailor in the Naval Reserve, was badly cut and bruised, and was taken to the Volunteer Hospital. Samuel Fleischman of 230 East Fourteenth Street was also injured, but he refused to go to a hospital. An army surgeon who was on the Vanderbilt Avenue car dressed minor cuts for about fifteen passengers.

Children Found Far from Shelter, Seeking Parents.

Special to The New York Times.

SUMMIT, N. J., Sept. 2.—Slipping away from the Mrs. B. H. Keeler Springle Home at Monroe yesterday, where they had been taken on Friday, Marcel and Raymond Fanchon, aged 9 and 7, were found today wandering in Summit, ten miles from the home. They had walked all afternoon and part of the night trying to get home to their mother and father, who live in Morristown. When found by Sheriff William H. Thompson they asked to be taken to their mother.

The Sheriff could not bring himself to tell them that their father was in France and their mother in a private hospital, so he told them that they were away and would come to the home for them in a few days.

PRAISES NEW FIRE FLEET.

Robert Adamson, Fire Commissioner, made public yesterday a report from Acting Chief Joseph B. Martin of the work of the newly organized auxiliary fleet of fireboats at the recent fire at the foot of Congress Street, Brooklyn, in which the steamships Baron Jedburgh and Christian Bor, and several lighters and small boats about Piers 25 and 26 were all on fire at one time. On one of the piers a large quantity of tallow, which burned fiercely and melted, ran into the river carrying a stream of fire toward other ships and piers. The alarm brought all the city fireboats and a large number of auxiliary fireboats owned by private companies.

Acting Chief Martin reported that the assistance given by these boats more than justified the Commissioner's action in organizing the fleet last December.

"In addition to our own fireboat fleet," Chief Martin reported, "these auxiliary boats did effective work: The Statington and Ithica of the Lehigh Valley Railroad; the Lancaster, Johnstown, and No. 14 of the Pennsylvania Railroad; the No. 11 of the Standard Oil Company; the Chauncey M. Depew and Nos. 8, 21, and 27 of the New York Central, and the Flemington of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. With a land force of twelve engine and four hook and ladder companies operating in the high pressure district with the force of fireboats and auxiliary tugboat fleet, the great volume of water furnished was indispensible in coping with and checking the fire."

The auxiliary fireboat fleet referred to consists of 149 tugboats owned by railroad, steamship, and other companies. It was organized because of the increased waterfront fire hazard due to the great increase in shipments of munitions to Europe. The waterfront has been divided into ten zones, and the fireboats of private companies within these zones respond to first alarm fires within their zones. All the fireboats included in the auxiliary fleet can be called when their services are needed. These boats have been equipped for fire fighting and their crews have been drilled to handle fires.

WRIST WATCH FOR POLICE.

Suggestion to Commissioner Woods Agitates Old-Timers of Force.

Hundreds of policemen were mildly excited yesterday over a report that started in Times Square, and by spoken word spread quickly across the Harlem River into the Bronx and southward over the bridges into Brooklyn. It was to the effect that Commissioner Woods had before him a suggestion that policemen on active duty, especially when regulating traffic, he required to wear wrist watches.

A detective of the Second Branch Bureau in Lexington Avenue, near Forty-third Street, it was asserted, had suggested the wearing of wrist watches by the uniformed force to the Commissioner's office, in competition with other suggestions arriving daily from the men in the ranks as to the best way of improving the service.

"What will the old timers say when they hear of this?" asked one patrolman with time stripes on his sleeve. "Just imagine the men of twenty years ago—or even ten years ago for that matter—wearing wrist watches. Officially I am for it if the suggestion becomes an order, though personally I will wear mine above the elbow. Some no doubt will prefer to strap them to the small of the back, but as I understand it that practice is not followed in good society. Well, well, times certainly do change."

"I notice that the suggestion comes from a man who is not now in uniform," commented a policeman whose face indicated a sourness of disposition. "I will give no opinion of a thing that may be under the consideration of those at Headquarters, but I do hope the man who is said to have made the suggestion will be put back into uniform and sentenced to wear an alarm clock on his arm."

CHINA BORROWS $5,000,000.

Pledges Surplus Salt Revenues for Loan by Yokohama Bank.

PEKING, Wednesday, Aug. 29, (Delayed.)—The Chinese Minister of Finance today signed an agreement with the Yokohama Specie Bank for a loan of 10,000,000 yen (about $5,000,000) on Chinese Treasury bills, which will be issued in Japan at the rate of 93, with 1 per cent. commission to the bank. The security will be the surplus from the salt monopoly revenue.

The agreement provides that the money is for "current administrative expenses." The term of the loan is one year, with the privilege of an extension to two years. It is stipulated that the loan may be considered an advance from and included in the large loan allied bankers are considering for China.

FOUR KILLED AT AUTO RACE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 2.—Forty thousand people attended the auto races here today. At the close of the race the crowd ran upon the track, and a car going at a speed of forty miles an hour crashed into the throng. Four were killed and three injured. The car was driven by Frank Knight.

The 170-mile race was won by a Panhard car; the Mercer car was second and the Stutz third.

MAKE CLAIM ON GERMANY.

Owners Demand $385,000 for Torpedoing of Argentine Ship Oriana.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 2.—The owners of the Argentine sailing vessel Oriana have prepared a claim, which will be presented to the Foreign Minister and forwarded to the German Government, amounting to 385,000 pesos gold, (nearly $385,000,) to cover the loss of the ship and cargo. This action will be taken in view of the settlement of the Toro case with Germany.

BABY'S CRIES REVEAL MURDER AND SUICIDE

FLEES, THEN ENDS LIFE

Couple Had Quarreled and Separated Over Money Expended on Perfecting New Rifle Lock.

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 2.—Mrs. Stephen Sarrenty, who keeps a boarding house at 84 Wall Street, was awakened just before daylight this morning by the persistent crying of a child. The only baby in the house was the 2-year-old girl of Mrs. Virginia Bakensky, who had come to the house six months before, and was employed in a stove polish factory, and when Mrs. Sarrenty recalled that the baby was not given to crying much she began to fear that something was wrong. Then she recalled two muffled reports heard while she was still half asleep and not clearly appreciated at the time; and upon this she went up to Mrs. Bakensky's room and pounded on the door. There was no response, and Mrs. Sarrenty opened the door to find the woman lying dead in bed with two bullet wounds in her breast. She had been shot apparently while asleep, and the baby, in bed beside her, was unharmed.

A ladder at the back window, purloined from a neighboring yard, showed how the murderer had entered the room, but there was no trace of him. Mrs. Sarrenty notified the police and Detective Captain Benjamin Turner started a search of all the surrounding country. Word of the shooting was sent to Mrs. Bakensky's old home, at Lyndhurst, N. J., but her husband, Joseph, a prosperous traveling salesman, was not at home.

Neighbors told the police that the couple had quarreled six months ago because Bakensky had been spending what his wife regarded as too much money in perfecting an invention—an improved rifle lock—and that she had finally refused to live with him. They said, too, that he had made many attempts to persuade his wife to come back with her child, but that she had persistently refused and had preferred to earn her own living as a mill hand in Passaic.

Shortly before noon several boys told a policeman who had been stationed in front of the boarding house that a man was lying on the river bank a few hundred feet in the rear. The policeman followed them and found Bakensky dead by the water's edge, with a bullet from his own revolver in his head. Apparently in his flight he had feared to get away by Wall Street, which is well lighted and much traveled, and so had made his way down the long back yard to the seven-foot board fence, which he must have thought would lead to safety. But upon climbing it he found himself trapped at the river's edge, with no way of escape save back through the yard and Wall Street or ahead of him by swimming to the Bergen County shore. The police believe that, despairing of escape, he then shot himself.

CALL OUT SHIPYARD MEN.

4,000 Workers at Portland, Ore., May Quit on Sept. 7.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 2.—All workmen in Portland shipbuilding yards affiliated with the Metal Trades Council were ordered at a meeting of that body today to go on strike on Sept. 7 unless their pending demands for higher wages were granted.

The order affects 4,000 men.

LABOR TO CELEBRATE WITHOUT A PARADE

Secretary W. B. Wilson and Representative Jeannette Rankin to Address Brooklyn Meeting.

Labor Day will be quietly celebrated here today. There will be no parade and the principal demonstration will be in Brooklyn, where William B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor, and Representative Jeannette Rankin of Montana will be the speakers. The day's program will include outings, games, and athletic sports. The Longshoremen's Union will go to Whitestone Landing, L. I., for an outing in Duer's Park. The Civil Service Forum will hold its first outing in Donnelly's Grove, College Point.

Miss Rankin will make her first public speech at a dinner in the evening given at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby Street. During her stay in this city she will be the guest of Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Vice Chairman and Congressional Chairman of the Suffrage Party.

The Brooklyn meeting will be under the auspices of the Brooklyn Central Labor Union, and the Representative will speak on suffrage as viewed by labor. Maurice De Young, Chairman of the Labor Day Conference, will preside at the Lyceum meeting and the other speakers will be Park Commissioner Raymond V. Ingersoll of Brooklyn, George L. Berry, International President of the Printing Pressmen's Union, and John P. Coughlin, President of the Brooklyn Central Labor Union.

The Secretary of Labor will be a speaker at a picnic to be held by the Brooklyn Central Labor Union in Prospect Park in the afternoon.

In many pulpits in the city yesterday labor problems created by the war were touched upon, at the suggestion of the American Federation of Labor and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

"Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread," was the subject of a sermon preached at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine by Dr. Thomas F. Gailor, Bishop of Tennessee. "For every success we achieve in life," he said, "we depend on God. He added that there are those who deride the belief in a personal God who takes a personal interest in our affairs as something outgrown, a product of the infancy of thought. They say that we are ruled by invariable laws. God is no less God because he rules by law. A father is no less a father because he makes rules for his children. Behind all the laws is the untrammeled personality of God who holds us in the hollow of His hand and who in His wisdom directs the operation of all law.

"Man is not a clod or a brute but a child of God made in his image. He does not come to God as a beggar or a slave, but as a son. It is because we are giving and doing something for the Kingdom that we have a right to ask that we be given our daily bread."

WHERE CITY'S MONEY WENT.

Controller Prendergast Issues Semi-Annual Financial Report.

The semi-annual financial report of the city government was made public yesterday by Controller William A. Prendergast. It is a volume of some 200 pages, most of which are taken up with tables comparing the receipts and disbursements of the first six months of 1917 with the same period for 1916.

The report shows that contract work for the city has not greatly decreased because of shortage of labor or other reasons in the last year. Contract vouchers for the first half of 1917 were $27,985,876; for the same period of 1916 the total was $27,555,973. The total contract outlay from Jan. 1 to June 30, 1917, included the following: Water, gas, and electricity, $3,197,467; rapid transit, $11,240,387; highways and sewers, $3,307,318.

WARNED TO PREVENT GOLD EXPORTS TO FOE

Federal Reserve Board Urges Banks to Scrutinize Certain Classes of Transactions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Bank accounts of enemy aliens and international banking transactions involving the possible exportation of gold are under careful scrutiny by the Federal Reserve Board, which is co-operating with the State Department in preventing any part of the gold accumulation of the United States from reaching the enemy through neutral countries.

"The board has suggested that each banker doing business in this country," says the board's bulletin, made public today, "should scrutinize with particular care such accounts as might be held by his bank for any resident alien enemy, and in event any suspicious transactions occur in connection with such accounts, that they be reported immediately to the board for transmission to the proper department.

"The transactions which are interesting to the State Department may be divided into three classes:

1. Foreign exchange transactions between banks in this country and banks in neutral countries in Europe.
2. Ordinary banking transactions, such as the obtaining of credits by alien enemies resident in the United States.
3. Banking transactions between this country and Mexico or Central American and South American countries.

"The State Department is especially interested in preventing all transfers of money by cable, draft or shipments of currency or otherwise for the account of alien enemies."

Gold exports this year have been heavier than at any time since the war started. Notwithstanding the heavy exports the gold supply of the country has increased approximately $245,000,000 since Jan. 1, the present stock being in excess of $2,000,000,000, one-third of the world's supply.

WAR CALLS RAILROAD MEN.

Pennsylvania System Has 2,549 Volunteers Now in the Service.

Nearly every department of the Pennsylvania Railroad system, it was announced yesterday, has furnished volunteers for military service. To date there are 2,549 serving with the colors, of whom seventy-seven are commissioned officers and thirty are students at the various officers' training camps. With the first draft call 3,000 more men are to go, and 57,000 other employes are liable to military service under the law. Women have already taken the places of some of the men in a few departments.

The commissioned railroad men include a Colonel, a Lieutenant Colonel, three Majors, twenty-two Captains, twenty-four First and twenty-six Second Lieutenants. Horace M. Reading, who was Freight Agent on the Trenton Division, is the Colonel of the Second Regiment, New Jersey Infantry; H. H. Maxfield, Superintendent of Motive Power for the New Jersey Division, is Lieutenant Colonel of the Nineteenth United States Regiment Engineers, (railway;) C. D. Barrett and C. S. Gaskill, Master Mechanics respectively of the Williamsport and Baltimore Divisions, are Majors in the same regiment of engineers, and R. C. Morse, Jr., Trainmaster, Philadelphia Terminal Division, is a Major in the Transportation Corps and Chief of Embarkation. Captains and Lieutenants hold commissions in the units of several States. The remainder of the employes volunteering to the service represent 2,442 enlisted men in the army and navy.

Father Donnelly Army Chaplain.

The Rev. Father Francis P. Donnelly, pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church at Port Richmond, S. I., has been appointed a Chaplain in the United States Army. Father Donnelly is also the Chaplain of the Staten Island Lodge of Elks, 841. He has also been Chaplain of the Irish Volunteers of America.

SENDING WOMEN TO FRANCE

England Has 4,000 There Now Engaged in Army Work.

HEADQUARTERS OF WOMEN'S ARMY AUXILIARY CORPS, BEHIND BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, Aug. 15, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Up to April of this year the employment of women with the British Army had been solely confined to England. Today 4,000 women are employed in France on army work.

At the beginning of the year a prominent staff officer was sent to France to report on labor supply for the army and on economizing man power, in order to weed out the largest possible number of able-bodied men for the fighting line. One of his recommendations was the employment of women.

"In the army at home," he said, "the success of woman labor has been conspicuous, and women are to be found in numerous offices and cooking in many of the home military establishments. Results have shown that the sex difficulty has not been anything like what some had predicted. The women have worked hard, and the men have respected them."

In accordance with his recommendation the employment of women labor was approved in the following capacities: Ambulance and motor car drivers, clerks and typists, storewomen, checkers, telegraphers, telephone operators, postal employes, orderlies, cooks and domestic servants, tailors, bakers, shoemakers, messengers, printers, gardeners, (for graves,) and grooms. Cooks and those engaged in domestic service receive $100 to $130 a year; the other departments show rates of pay varying from $5 to $10 per week. Women engaged in domestic service get free board and lodging; those in the other departments have a deduction of $3.50 per week for board and lodging if they live in Government hotels. Every woman joining signs an agreement to serve for "one year or the duration of the war."

HONORS MRS. MORGENTHAU.

France Gives Her the Ribbon of the Legion for Her Hospital Work.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs on Saturday bestowed the decoration of the Legion of Honor upon Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, the wife of the former American Ambassador to Turkey, in recognition of the work she did at the French hospital at Constantinople in the early part of the war. In decorating Mrs. Morgenthau the Minister thanked her in the name of the French Government for her labors in behalf of the French wounded and sick, saying it was largely due to her efforts that the French hospital in Constantinople had been able to accomplish the work it had done and was continuing to do.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgenthau plan to sail for the United States on the first steamship on which they can obtain suitable accommodations.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau left the United States on June 21, 1917, with her husband, who was head of the mission sent to Egypt to investigate the condition of the Jews in Palestine. She has always been very much interested in the work of the Red Cross, and has been actively identified since the outbreak of the war with many hospital interests in Turkey.

When Mrs. Morgenthau returned to the United States on Oct. 14, 1915, she had done much toward organizing hospital work in Turkey. At that time she spoke of the work being done by the French hospital at Pera, which was taken over from the nuns and equipped with 250 beds. In addition to aiding this hospital Mrs. Morgenthau did a great deal toward increasing the facilities of the Red Cross hospital there, which at that time had accommodations for 700 injured. She spent a great deal of her time in this hospital looking after the wounded.

Normal Times

We are all awaiting the return of normal times; in fact, we are always awaiting the return of normal times, but what are normal times?

Look at the barometers of our basic industries, records of continuous advance in production, with depressions from time to time, of course, but each succeeding wave rearing its crest higher than the one before.

Who can place his finger upon the normal of the steel industry? Certainly we do not expect to return to the production of twenty years ago, ten years ago, or even five years ago.

There are people who contemplate investing in building or securities, and they propose to defer their operations until normal times. The prices of materials and securities may, indeed, at some future date decline to former levels, but we doubt if the prospective investors will consider conditions normal when that happens.

There are people who would like to readjust their banking arrangements and profess a preference for the Harriman National Bank, but they will wait for normal times.

In fact, there is not and never was any time like the present for a constructive move in business. Do it now. The Harriman National Bank will be pleased to hear from any sound merchant who has been considering transfer of his account or opening a new account.

DE PINNA

There is, perhaps, a more subtle art in contriving the demurely simple costumes of the young lady from 15 to 19 years, than is bestowed upon the more elaborate confections that meet the needs of her mother or elder sisters.

De Pinna realized it, however, long years ago and thanks to this perception so much pains are taken with the designing, as well as the perfect tailoring, of our productions for young ladies that they have an inevitable appeal for the girl herself, as well as for those who control her outfitting.

Misses' Coats designed by De Pinna with a full knowledge of the dress requirements of our fashionable schools and colleges. The fabrics used are imported tweeds, Llama cloth, knit cloth, Bolivia, suede velour—sizes 14 to 18 years—$30. to $95.

Misses' Tailored Suits at De Pinna's are many of them made of the smart rough English, Irish and Scotch tweeds and homespuns. English worsteds, knit cloths and velours are also shown in very smart but severely simple designs. Sizes 14 to 18 years—$35. to $85.

Tailored Dresses are distinctly a feature of the outfit of a young lady at school or college. De Pinna tailoring gives unusual smartness to the English navy serge, wool Jersey, velour and plaid combinations and imported wool plaids—sizes 14 to 18 years—$28. to $75.
